Spin-Off of Paris Riot Scatters Through Italy

ROME (AP) — Violence and goddess Minerva in red demonstrations spinning off the French national crisis streets, there was a prospect of Italy again Saturday, political instability after the So-spreading from Rome to Turin, Naples and Florence. Students battled with fists and rocks at Rome University, but the school grounds remained in the control of activists demonstrating against President Charles de Gaulle of France. Police and leftist extremists clashed violently in the center of Turin after a rally in support of French strikers. Reports from the northern Italian industrial city told of widespread injuries and arrests. Shop windows were battered in by red banners and poles bearing huge portraits of Mao Tse-tung.

In Naples, 1,000 students first seized the local university, then marched through the center of town shouting anti-De Gaulle slogans. They blocked traffic for hours by staging a sit-in on one of Naples' busiest avenues.

At Florence University, students occupied the rector's offices, saying their action was a gesture toward "the struggle of French students and workers."

Rome University's rebels set up barricades at all gates and deposited heaps of stones and bricks nearby apparently ready for a siege. They ran up red flags on major buildings under their control and draped a huge bronze statue of the Greek not known.

Virginia Heart Recipient Dies

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Joseph G. Klett, 54, of Orange, Va., the world's 16th heart transplant patient, died Saturday at the Medical College of Virginia Hospital—almost exactly a week after he underwent the operation.

The hospital said death occurred at 5:28 p.m. "due to failure of the heart transplant." "Deterioration of the patient's condition began suddenly Friday evening, the hospital said. "The ex-

Homeward Rush Awaited Holiday Traffic Toll Well Behind Estimates

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS: Based on an estimate of the nation's Memorial Day number of cars to be driven and weekend traffic toll mounted miles traveled, the National Saturday at a pace well below Safety Council had forecast the advance estimates.

The toll during the third day Wednesday and midnight Sunday of the four-day weekend day could range between 625 reached 351. For comparison, a total of 488 traffic deaths were recorded during a recent four-day nonholiday period.

Howard Pyle, president of the National Safety Council, said he had reason to be encouraged of 488 highways deaths was "although it is always pre-ture to count lives saved before the battle is over." But Pyle said the death count was running well below the council's advance estimate. If motorists continue their comparatively good record throughout Sunday, he added, there is a chance the holiday toll would fall even below that expected from a nonholiday period of the same length.

"Maintain Vigilance" Pyle congratulated America's motorists for their showing and said "as they confront the hazardous homebound period, we urge them to maintain their vigilance against accidents."

The most dangerous time on the highways normally is the last day of a holiday period when motorists are returning to their homes, sometimes tired and in a hurry.

Bad Weather Patches of fog or rain prevailed in the Northwest and in much of the eastern third of the nation Saturday, making normal highway speeds hazardous. Cool weather discouraged outdoor activities in some northern states, although Memorial Day is considered a warm weather holiday.

The record traffic toll for any warm weather holiday period is 732, set during the four-day Independence Day observance last year.

In other outdoor accidents over the current weekend, boating mishaps claimed 25 lives and 59 persons drowned.

showing at the polls on the Christian Democrats and accused them of lacking the will to enact social and economic reforms. That faction believed withdrawal would brighten the party's tarnished progressive reputation.

The move opened the way for a minority transitional government of Christian Democrats, possibly with participation of the tiny Republican Party.

Elsewhere in the capital, moderate students trying to open the university faculty buildings for spring examinations were repulsed when they sought to fight their way into the grounds.

Hundreds of rebels inside succeeded in clamping shut the university's main gate. The face-to-face battles gave way to a rock-throwing fight that caused injuries to both sides and damage to automobiles.

Police patrolled the area but did not intervene.

The students controlling the university since Friday planned a meeting to decide what to do next.

As night fell, police throughout the city went on alert against a possible recurrence of the bloody street fighting and car burning that turned a colorful section of old Rome into a guerrilla battlefield Friday.

That riot was sparked by thousands of youths, many of them pro-Chinese Communists and anarchists, who converged on the French Embassy and burned the French president in effigy.

It was the first serious violence in Italy stemming directly from a solidarity demonstration for French opponents of De Gaulle.

Strikers Urged to Stand Firm

Flags of Anarchy, Revolution Waved By Thousands of French Protesters

By LOUIS NEVIN
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — Tens of thousands of students and workers, brandishing the flags of anarchy and revolution, demonstrated against President Charles de Gaulle here Saturday and urged the millions of strikers still out in France to stand firm.

But Parisians by the scores of thousands motored away from the turmoil, as gasoline supplies returned to normal, for a long Pentecost weekend in the sunny countryside.

The newly revamped French Cabinet held its first meeting with De Gaulle and appealed for massive support for the 77-year-old chief of state and his followers in the election, set for June 23 and June 30, of a new National Assembly.

A timid back-to-work movement that set in Friday continued. A major break in the strike wave still crippling the country was postponed at least until Tuesday.

Government and union negotiators, however, reached agreement on a strike settlement to get Paris buses and subways moving again after 16 days. This remained subject to approval by the striking rank and file. The package included a pay raise of 12 per cent.

The state-owned gas and electricity industries and union negotiators reached an accord reported to include wage increases of 20 per cent for the lowest paid workers and 12 per cent for those at the top.

Some suburban trains were running in Strasbourg. They were the first to move out since strikers sidetracked all French trains in mid-May.

Later, about 5,000 students thronged the dusty courtyard of Paris University's science school to form a new "revolutionary movement" linking students and workers in an effort to keep the strikes going.

"A large explosion will shake the Gaullist regime this autumn, or maybe in several weeks," declared Jean Pierre Vigier, a research professor who was expelled from the Communist party last month for openly opposing its decisions. The massive demonstration that took place earlier focused on a square named June 18, 1940—the date De Gaulle summoned Frenchmen to unite against the German World War II occupation—in the Montparnasse quarter on the left bank of the Seine. It was sponsored by the National Students Union.

Students in Columns The broad square was filled with the Rue de Rennes and Boulevard Montparnasse, leading to the square were jammed for about 300 yards. Columns of students marched in from the northeast of the square. Estimates of the crowd ranged from 20,000 to 50,000.

Daniel Cohn-Bendit, his red hair still dyed black, made his first appearance outside the Sorbonne since his clandestine return to France a week ago. The 23-year-old student leader joined the demonstrators to march at the head of the procession beside Jacques Sauvageot, head of the National Students Union, which organized the demonstration.

The students and young workers carried banners calling for the resignation of De Gaulle and announcing "The struggle continues." They urged the millions of workers still idle to stay on strike.

Riot police were on the alert but stayed away to avoid provoking the demonstrators and there was no immediate move to arrest Cohn-Bendit. A German student of sociology at the Nanterre branch of the University of Paris, he was largely responsible for setting off the wave of social turmoil in France.

Kennedy, McCarthy Agree In Criticism of Johnson

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Sens Eugene J. McCarthy and Robert F. Kennedy, disagreeing on how the Vietnam war settlement should be approached, joined Saturday in attacking what they called President Johnson's response to Negro rioting.

Colliding in their first campaign face-down, the two contenders for the Democratic Presidential nomination disputed on a televised program the point of whether the United States should accept in advance the inclusion of Communists in the Saigon government as a result of a possible peace solution.

Answering and commenting on questions asked by a panel of newsmen on ABC's "Issues and Answers" program, the two chief contenders to Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey in the race for the nomination reemphasized their demands for de-escalation of the South Vietnam war. They agreed the Communists must have some role in a new Saigon government.

Kennedy accused the Minnesota senator of desiring to force a coalition government on South Vietnam. McCarthy denied this. But he said the United States must be willing in the end to accept some sort of coalition.

In a highlight of their battle for California's 174 convention nominating votes which will be at stake in Tuesday's primary, the two senators voiced sharp criticism of what they labeled nation living in our midst.

He said they must be given failure to cope with unrest in genuine hope that their conditions will be alleviated and that Kennedy said that there was they will not have to get along "no excuse for the riots of last with the same old menial jobs, the same poverty and 'the rats' "All we did was say a prayer that they talk about."

Scorpion Still Being Hunted

Two More Ships To Join Search South of Azores

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The Navy said Saturday the submarine rescue ship Kittiwake and the nuclear submarine Gato have begun searching near the Azores for the missing nuclear submarine Scorpion and her crew of 99.

They will be joined by the Navy salvage ships, Preserver and the Cruiser and Irving Banks, 350 miles south of San Miguel Island in the Azores, on Sunday and Monday, respectively.

The Scorpion was south of the Azores when she radioed her last position report May 21. Her projected course would have taken her within 30 miles of the Cruiser and Irving Banks, which are underwater ridges seeking certain additional fringe benefits.

As hope for the missing submarine dimmed almost to the vanishing point, the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy announced it has started an investigation into the Scorpion's disappearance.

The committee sent a staff expert from Washington to Norfolk, headquarters for the search, to gather information on what might have caused the Scorpion to fail to complete her mission, an aide said.

A similar probe by the committee was conducted five years ago when the nuclear submarine Thresher went down off Cape Cod, Mass., with the loss of 129 crewmen.

Atlantic Fleet spokesmen said Saturday the Deep Diver, a miniature submarine with four crewmen and some degree of maneuverability, will join the Kittiwake and the Gato off the Azores Sunday.

Construction To Stop for Second Time

BY ARLEN BOARDMAN

Post-Crescent Staff Writer
Fox Valley contractors, just recovering from the effects of a 44-day strike by bricklayers and cement finishers, found themselves in a new labor dispute today.

About 1,500 carpenters, members of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, Fox River Valley District Council, AFL-CIO, voted Saturday to strike against the contractors.

An association spokesman said Saturday that the strike could have more adverse effects on Fox Valley construction projects than the masons' walk-out had.

The early-afternoon strike vote came after more than 500 union members gathered at Sabre Lanes in the Town of Menasha and turned down the final contract offer made by the association.

No tally on the strike vote was available, but a union spokesman said over two-thirds of the union members rejected the offer.

Shut Everything Merlyn Van Dyke, Oshkosh, president of the contractors association, said, "This will shut everything down."

Contacted by The Post-Crescent immediately after the strike vote was taken, Van Dyke expressed surprise and alarm. He said the association "made the same offer to the carpenters that the masons had accepted after a seven-week strike."

The final contractors association offer provided a $1.80 pay increase spread over a three-year period.

Speaking for the carpenters, Jerry H. Jahnke, secretary-treasurer of the union, said the offer still left his union 31 cents an hour behind the masons.

Although he would not specify what they were, Jahnke also said the union is seeking certain additional fringe benefits.

Humphrey Far Ahead In Backing of Congress

Kennedy Counts Only 2 Senate Supporters, McCarthy Has None

By CARL P. LEUBSDORF
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey is far outstripping his two rivals in endorsements from House and Senate members in the battle for the Democratic presidential nomination.
An announcement Saturday by Sen. Joseph M. Montoya of New Mexico that he is joining his senior colleague, Clinton P. Anderson, in the Humphrey camp brought the vice president's support from his former colleagues to more than a dozen.
In addition, the Humphrey camp counts many others among the 64 Democratic senators as leaning to the vice president and likely to support him either openly or tacitly before the party's nominating convention opens in Chicago Aug. 28.
In contrast, Sen. Robert F. Kennedy has open support only Fred Harris and Minnesota's Walter F. Mondale, are national co-chairmen of United Democrats for Humphrey.

Sen. E. L. Bartlett of Alaska heads a pro-Humphrey delegation from his state, and Sen. and Sen. Joseph D. Tydings of Maryland. Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy has yet to pick up a single Senate supporter although some fellow critics of U.S. Vietnam policy have given him private encouragement.
House Trend
In the House, the trend is much the same with Humphrey holding open support from some 50 of the 247 Democrats, while Kennedy has about 15—mostly from New York and California—and McCarthy about a half-dozen.
All this reflects the reliance Humphrey is placing on powerful Democratic officeholders and indicates the problems faced by the two senators in their effort to deny the nomination to Humphrey.
The situation is Congress is similar to that among Democratic governors.
While a majority of the 24 Democrats is remaining publicly neutral, Humphrey already has support from Govs. William L. Guy of North Dakota, John J. McKeithen of Louisiana, John Burns of Hawaii, Charles Terry of Delaware and Hewlett C. Smith of West Virginia.
He hopes to pick up the open support of Govs. Warren E. Hearnes of Missouri, John B. Connally of Texas, Buford Ellington of Tennessee and Roger Branigan of Indiana.
Kennedy has two governors, Philip H. Hoof of Vermont and Kenneth M. Curtis of Maine, but neither controls his state's convention delegation.
Among senators, Sen. Harrison A. Williams Jr., of New Jersey expressed support for Humphrey before the vice president even entered the race, while Senate President Pro Tem Carl Hayden showed up for his formal announcement.

Percy Admits He'd Run for Vice President

Nomination Almost Certainly Nixon's, Illinois Senator Says
ROCK ISLAND, Ill. (AP) — Illinois Sen. Charles H. Percy said Saturday he would accept the Republican vice-presidential nomination if asked to do so by the party's presidential candidate.
Percy, at a news conference, was asked if he would accept the nomination under any circumstances. He said yes, and commented he felt Richard M. Nixon was "99 and 44-100s percent sure of getting the nomination."
Asked specifically if he would accept the vice-presidential place on a Nixon ticket, Percy said, "under present circumstances, yes—providing the Illinois delegation and the Illinois Republican Party release me from responsibilities as a U.S. senator."
Favorite Son
In reply to a question of whether he would disavow any possible move by supporters to nominate him as the presidential candidate in the event of a convention deadlock, Percy said it would depend on the circumstances at the time.
There has been some talk of Percy going to the Republican National Convention in the role of favorite son of Illinois.
Illinois Republicans will choose 48 of their 58 delegates to the nominating sessions at the June 11 primary. The other 10 will be chosen later.
An Associated Press poll of the delegate candidates last month showed 32 for Nixon, 15 leaning toward Nixon and 15 with no choice. The others among the 79 delegate candidates did not reply.
Goldwater's Disabled Plane Lands Safely
PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Former Sen. Barry Goldwater's twin-engine Cessna 310 landed without incident with one engine disabled Saturday as fire department units lined the runway at Sky Harbor Airport.
Goldwater, who had an unidentified passenger aboard, was returning from Melbourne, Fla., where he delivered an address Friday to the graduating class of an academy.

Little Chance Seen For Voting Age of 18

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson's endorsement of lowering the voting age to 18 appears unlikely to win congressional approval of a constitutional amendment this year.
A Senate judiciary subcommittee had concluded three days of hearings on the proposal before Johnson unexpectedly announced his support in a speech at Texas Christian University Wednesday night.
A constitutional amendment such as he indicated he will submit to Congress in a few days was introduced Jan. 12, 1967, by Sen. Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana.
With 35 other senators—21 Democrats and 14 Republicans—listed as co-sponsors, it provides that the right to vote shall not be denied by the United States or by any state on account of age if a citizen is 18 years of age or older.
Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois was among the senators who joined Mansfield in offering it, but even with this bipartisan sponsorship the outlook for the amendment is not regarded as very favorable at this time.
This is because of these factors:
—The judiciary subcommittee on constitutional amendments, headed by Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., reports increasing opposition mail linked to student disorders on college campuses.
—The rejection by voters in several states of proposals to lower the voting age.
Six Die in Fire On Quebec Island
ST. JEAN, Que. (AP) — Six persons died early Saturday when fire swept through their 300-year-old home in this community of Ile d'Orleans, an island in the St. Lawrence River about five miles north of Quebec City.
Dead are Wilfrid, 22; Agathe, 16; Jeanne d'Arc, 15; Ange Amee, 14, and Reynald, 11, children of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lachance, and Hermenegilde Vaillancourt, 48, a brother of Mrs. Lachance. Lachance, his wife and three other children escaped.
Police said a kitchen stove was believed to have exploded. A voluntary fire brigade had to pump water from a mile away to the house because of low tide in the St. Lawrence. They were unable to save the house.

Administration Trying to Save Main Great Society Programs

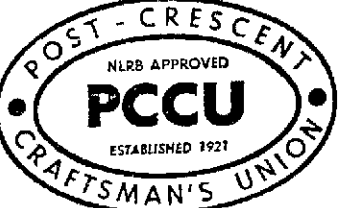

Strike Hits 2 Top Aluminum Producers

Walkout Disregards Earlier Settlement By Steel Workers

NEW YORK (AP) — A strike hit the nation's two largest aluminum producers Saturday, despite what is usually a pattern-setting agreement with the AFL-CIO United Steelworkers Union.
About 13,000 members of the AFL-CIO Aluminum Workers Union and 4,150 members of the United Auto Workers struck Alcoa and Reynolds Metal Co. plants in 12 states.
Separate talks between Alcoa and Reynolds and the two striking unions continued, with federal mediators on hand.
The steelworkers union settled with Alcoa Friday night and Saturday agreed with Reynolds and three other firms—Kaiser Aluminum & Chemical Co., the Ormet Corp and Olin Aluminum.
Half of Workers
The steelworkers union represents about half of the industry's 60,000 workers. The rest are represented by other unions.
Alcoa immediately announced price increases to meet the cost of the steelworkers contract. Aluminum ingots go up 1 cent per pound to 26 cents. Fabricated products go up 4 per cent.
The steelworkers agreement came as that union prepared for talks opening here Monday with the steel industry. The contracts for 480,000 steel workers expire Aug. 1.
Present Scales
The unions' aluminum agreement provides an average wage increase of 55.9 cents over the next three years, a steelworkers' spokesman said. Present scales range from $3.09 to $3.28 an hour.
The new contract also includes improved pensions, hospital insurance and unemployment benefits and a new $30-a-week vacation bonus.
Alcoa said the old contract cost more than $4.50 an hour per man. A union spokesman said he couldn't compute the total cost of the new package, but said it probably exceeded the 6.1 per cent yearly increase recently won in the can industry. Copper workers won 8 per cent after a nine-month strike.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Johnson Administration reportedly will try to preserve its major "Great Society" programs in the $6-billion spending cutback Congress is expected to include in a bill to raise income taxes 10 per cent.
And the current thinking inside the Administration is to carve the cutback evenly—about $3 billion from defense spending not directly related to the Vietnam war and another $3 billion from civilian programs.
"We're going to try to protect the key social programs," one official commented.
A final decision on specific cuts probably won't be made for several months and will depend largely on how much Congress chops from the budget through appropriation bills still awaiting action.
Construction Projects
Federal construction projects, including highways and rivers and harbors, are considered ripe for cutbacks.
The $1.6 billion in federal pay increases scheduled to go into effect on July 1 throughout the country is now apparently safe from the economy ax.
It would take action by Congress to delay the increase and one government source said neither Congress nor the administration is willing to take this step.
The $6 billion in spending cuts came closer to reality last week when the House refused to go along with the $4-billion figure agreed to reluctantly by President Johnson.
Johnson, however, said later he would sign the compromise plan calling for the $6 billion in cuts coupled with the 10 per cent income tax surcharge he contends is vitally needed for a stable economy.
The House has scheduled a vote on the package for June 12. If adopted as now expected in mid-June, Americans would begin paying higher taxes about July 1.
Government sources said before last week's House vote, the administration still retained some hope that Congress would cut spending by only $4 billion.
"But now it's here and we've got to live with it," one official said.
Government departments and agencies already are reviewing their programs to determine where cuts can be made.
Under the compromise package, no cuts would be made in war spending, interest on the federal debt, veterans and social security benefits.
Defense Cuts
Officials said about $50 billion in defense spending is not directly related to the Vietnam War and any defense cuts would come from this. The war is now costing close to $30 billion a year.
About $39.5 billion in civilian programs falls under the heading of "relatively controllable," but these include many of the social welfare programs which the Poor People's campaign is seeking to expand.
Some unpopular programs such as foreign aid can expect to feel the congressional economic ax, one source said, and further cuts by the administration in such fields are unlikely.

Soviets Criticize Mao
MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union by the official Soviet news agency, Tass.
Chinese Communist Chairman Mao Tse-tung Saturday of long rivals for ideological leadership to get the Soviet Union's Communist Party and the United States involved in a nuclear war over Vietnam.
The Soviet party's Central Committee has endorsed them: China has denounced the idea of negotiating with the United States.
The Arrived
The Kommunist extracts were distributed by Tass shortly after the arrival in Moscow of Le Duc Tho, a hard-line leader in North Vietnam's Communist Party. This is en route to Paris as a special adviser to his country's negotiators.
"A characteristic feature of Mao's policy is the readiness to sacrifice hundreds of millions of people and doom to complete destruction whole nations," the article said.
It warned Communists against listening to advice from China, saying that Mao called for violence "with a complete disregard for objective conditions and with another world war at stake."
Extracts from the Communist article were released in advance of the journal's appearance of the journal's appearance.

Some Draft Resisters Find Canada Haven Bright 1968 Seen

BY HARRY F. ROSENTHAL

TORONTO (AP) - They call themselves draft resisters, shying from the harsher term.

They have turned their backs on their country to escape military service, some in sorrow, some in bitterness, to become Americans in exile: Draft dodgers.

Canada has received many of them. Just how many is a guessing game. Canadian authorities, who claim to have no way of keeping tab, say there are 1,000 or less. The draft dodgers, who have no accurate count either, say there are as few as 5,000 or as many as 12,000.

"As you can well imagine we are not the first point of contact by those coming here to evade the draft," says Allen B. Moreland, U.S. consul general in Toronto. "However, our considered judgment is that the numbers have been greatly overstated in the past."

The U.S. Justice Department says that indictments for draft evasion as of last April totalled only 1381 but Selective Service lists 7,500 men as having failed to report for induction from 1965 to the present.

Despite disagreement over the number of evaders in Canada, no one questions that the number increases daily at 127 for landed immigrant status is a crossing points along the 3,500-mile border between the U.S. and Canada. Further, both American exiles and Canadian authorities anticipate a summer rush as a result of the U.S. government's decision last winter to lift deferments for most graduate students.

In the office of the Toronto Anti-Draft Programme, staffed primarily by draft dodgers, slouch two young men newly arrived from Detroit.

One is 6-foot-4, thin and handsome, wearing around his neck the symbol of the peace movement—a swept wing plane in a circle. The other is a fat, disheveled six-footer with a day's growth of beard, his stocking-less feet filthy in open sandals.

'I Wanna be Free'

"I want to be free of people telling me how to live my life," says the taller one, a music student. "I don't believe I can feel any loyalty to people who can elect men like Lyndon Johnson and Lester Maddox (Governor of Georgia)," says the other, a college dropout.

Piled in a corner of the tiny, cluttered office are their belongings—four suitcases, a cardboard box and a guitar case.

The fat one left Michigan State University in his freshman year. His 2-S student deferment ended then and 2½ months later he was called up for induction.

"I was barely making it anyway," he shrugs, "so I said 'damn the system' and applied for conscientious objector status. They reclassified me 1-A."

The tall one still is a student at Wayne State University with a safe 2-S, but says he has qualms about being a student while others are being drafted. "The minute they know I came here, they'll classify me 1-A," he says.

The men won't give their names—even to the antidraft organization—because they are in Canada only as visitors to size up things.

If things look favorable, they'll step across the border and return through Canadian immigration to apply for entry as landed immigrants—eligible to live and work in Canada, and safe from the draft. Canada, it self, has no compulsory military service, only volunteers.

There two 20-year olds still have a choice. They can go back.

Mark Satin can't. He made his choice when he sat out his induction date in the spring of 1967 in Toronto.

Satin, 21, the son of a college teacher, a handsome man with shoulder length hair, is perhaps the best known of American draft dodgers in Canada.

Word of his activities has spread through 100 "draft-counting" organizations in the United States—35 of which have the word "resistance" or "resisters" in their names.

Toronto Leader

Satin is chairman of the Toronto Anti-Draft Programme, the most active of 26 organizations in Canada set up to advise prospective American exiles. He is the editor of a "Manual for Draft-Age Immigrants to Canada," an 88-page book now in its second printing. Satin claims more than 20,000 copies have been sold or given away.

"We don't advertise immigration; none of our literature encourages people to immigrate," says Satin. "The only thing I encourage personally is not to take the government's word as final judgment, that it's your choice of whether to go into the Army—not the government's." The book does not play a siren song to Canada. In fact, one chapter warns "it is foolish for draft-delinquent Americans to expect that they will ever be able to return to the U.S. legally."

The book has been Satin's major project this year, a response, he says, to a growing volume of letters requesting information from the committee. The letters peaked at about 100 a day when graduate deferments were removed, he says, and still average 40 a day.

"Before I came up I thought there were log cabins and igloos in the middle of town," Satin says. "The first three months I knew no one here. Then I met by those coming here to evade the draft," says Allen B. Moreland, U.S. consul general in Toronto. "However, our considered judgment is that the numbers have been greatly overstated in the past."

The U.S. Justice Department says that indictments for draft evasion as of last April totalled only 1381 but Selective Service lists 7,500 men as having failed to report for induction from 1965 to the present.

Despite disagreement over the number of evaders in Canada, no one questions that the number increases daily at 127 for landed immigrant status is a crossing points along the 3,500-mile border between the U.S. and Canada. Further, both American exiles and Canadian authorities anticipate a summer rush as a result of the U.S. government's decision last winter to lift deferments for most graduate students.

In the office of the Toronto Anti-Draft Programme, staffed primarily by draft dodgers, slouch two young men newly arrived from Detroit. The other is a fat, disheveled six-footer with a day's growth of beard, his stocking-less feet filthy in open sandals.

Paid $50 Week

James Oliver, a 20-year-old from Elyria, Ohio, is one of the antidraft group's paid staff members—at $50 a week. Before coming to Canada he was active with CORE in Cleveland, with an adult education program in Knoxville, Tenn., and on the march to the Pentagon last fall. That same month he married 21-year-old Carol Seligmann of Westfield, N.J., a fellow student at Friends World Institute, a Quaker institution in Westbury, N.Y.

Jim asked to be classed a conscientious objector, but his draft board classified him 1-A. "We would rather be together than going to jail," Jim says. "Besides which, I don't think jail is politically effective because you have to have a really mass thing. So when you talk about a mass movement you have to have a half million people going to jail."

John Phillips, 22, a talented photographer who wears a thick red beard, is another who can't go back—and says he doesn't want to.

"I have no nationalistic fervor I have to shed," he says. "I never cheered for any one football team either. I think of specific things: As a photographer, the best market is New York. If I achieve any success I can't go to New York to see publishers." John, who is from Algona, Iowa, attended Friends World Institute where he met Laura, a Quaker.

"I've always been a pacifist, but my ability to articulate it came from Laura," says John. "My basic qualm about coming here was that it was hard on my mother. She didn't originally agree with my beliefs."

John also applied for conscientious objector status. "It was a bitter and unfortunate experience," he said. "I've a beard for four years and people in Algona just don't wear beards. I had to define God on the form and I'm an atheist. That upset them. If I didn't believe in God I just couldn't be telling the truth. The more they studied me, the more they thought I was lying."

Wanted to Teach

In Toronto John and Laura were accepted by the Company of Young Canadians, a government-sponsored project similar to VISTA. "I wanted to teach photography to young, underprivileged kids. Laura wanted to teach young children—and that's what we're doing."

When they arrived in Canada, the Phillipses went to Rochdale College, a free university for people who want to live in an academic environment. "We were instantly injected into a group and met people who were right up our alley," said John, who come here don't have it as well.

"Last night I went to a party thrown by a bunch of guys who want to start a social thing for draft dodgers. 'I've never met as lonely a group. They are having trouble getting jobs, meeting people. They are less dynamic, less full of ideals. Here they were, 15 or 20 people, sitting around on chairs too scared even to talk to each other—sipping chocolate. It didn't get off the ground. The only thing they could come up with were some indefinite plans for an indefinite visit to a zoo."

Much of the publicity about the draft dodgers have focused on the lonely ones. Undoubtedly there are many. The Satins, Olivers and Phillipses who have made friends quickly and easily sympathize with them, but say there isn't much they can do.

Four young men who are trying to do something about the lonely ones are Tom Kane, a 24-year-old computer programmer from Chicago; Reggie Johnson, 21, of Fayetteville, Ark.; Bob Dewart, 23, of Erie, Pa.; and Duane Goodvin, 22, from Wichita, Kan. Kane is the only one of the four who is married.

The group met in Dewart's apartment recently to make plans for a Union of American Exiles—a group that showed itself publicly for the first time at an anti-Vietnam demonstration in Toronto's Queens Park in April.

Hostile Feeling

"There is a hostile feeling toward Americans, but not necessarily against draft dodgers," said Reggie.

"I don't have a job yet," said Duane, a withdrawn youth who claims to be an all-out pacifist. "I can't meet any Canadians. There is a definite need for something that will involve us with others."

A pretty, slim, 29-year-old woman is a large force in helping draft dodgers find work. She is Naomi Wall, mother of an infant son, wife of an American—not a draft dodger—who is a professor of psychology at the University of Toronto.

She began contacting friends last July to find jobs for draft dodgers. Now she's on the antidraft program at $50 a week. Why?

"I've always wanted to do something that is relevant to the peace movement," she says. "Considering that I'm in Canada and the movement is in the United States, the most relevant thing happening here is the draft program."

Canada put into effect a series of new immigration regulations on Oct. 1, 1967, after complaints about prejudice from Asiatics and dark-skinned Europeans. It qualifies applicants for landed immigrant status if they can compile 50 of 100 assessment points. Selective service status is not a factor. But occupational demand rates 15 units maximum, occupational skill 10 units and employment opportunities in the area of destination five units. Being able to arrange for a job is a major factor for draft dodgers now.

The draft manual says "there is a popular misconception that you can be extradited for any crime that is a crime in both Canada and the U.S." while only specific crimes are extraditable. Mexico has fewer draft dodgers because there, draft dodging is an extraditable offense.

"Nothing in our law would

$38 Million LSD Ring Cracked by Scotland Yard

LONDON (AP) — Scotland Yard was credited today with smashing a back street operation aimed at flooding the United States with LSD worth more than $38 million on the black market.

On a tip from the FBI, 30 British detectives spent one year tracing the LSD-making enterprise to the back room of a little pharmacy in North London.

At London's Old Bailey Court Friday, the pharmacist, Victor James Kapur, 38, wept as he was sentenced to nine years in prison. A distributor of the pharmacy's big money product, Harry Nathan, 54, an antique dealer, was given seven years.

Detective Sgt. Arthur Kinner, head of the investigating team, told the court that nearly all the LSD made by Kapur had been smuggled to the United States.

Murder on the Campus

If the University of Wisconsin's publicity bureau measures such matters, it will no doubt record the year 1968 as the worst in its experience in unfavorable publicity exposure within the state and across the land.

Student riots, impertinent student demands upon regents and administrators, stormy engagements with Madison city police and other episodes have unfortunately obscured the fact that the vast majority of its faculty and students have continued to do what they came to the campus to do, to teach and to study.

But perhaps the worst news to originate on the campus in its history of more than a century was the cruel multiple stabbing to death of a freshman girl student last week in the center of the campus during daylight, where only through one chance in perhaps a million could the murderer have gone unnoticed.

Sterling Hall is one of the ancient buildings on the campus. It stands in the middle of a huge complex of classrooms, office buildings, libraries, dormitories and other facilities that contain thousands of students and faculty members. Perhaps in no other campus spot is traffic as heavy. Yet as we write, the people report that they have no clues to the identity of the killer of the girl whose parents dispatched her to Madison last fall secure in the knowledge that they had chosen for her one of the best institutions of learning in the country, and surely not in their wildest dreams conceived the idea that she might be in physical danger there.

Understandably, the University administration is deeply disturbed. Understandably, it is calling for a stronger force of police officers under its own control to patrol the campus as a kind of auxiliary to the sizable corps of policemen employed by the city of Madison.

We understand the distress. We support the requests. Only a week or so earlier an unidentified marauder threw a fire bomb into a window of historic South Hall and managed to damage or destroy huge quantities of vital student records and other materials.

It is difficult for alumni of the University, or for any other residents of Wisconsin, and it must be especially worrisome for the parents of the thousands of young people enrolled there, to hear of such mindless and brutal incidents, as State Senator Warren of Green Bay has called them. Maybe there is a sickness in our society, as some of the more voluble critics of our times have insisted. Something is deeply wrong when reporters can write of a university community, dedicated to the ideal of learning, that many of its students are cowering in their dormitories, terrified and confused.

California primary. If there is something of a draw, Mr. Humphrey will benefit. If Sen. Kennedy should lose, he almost surely will be out of business as was the case in 1964 for Gov. Nelson Rockefeller when he lost to Barry Goldwater in the Republican primary in that state.

The Republican results in Oregon mean that only a monumental blunder by Richard Nixon or a violent change in pre-convention issues can deny him the nomination. Gov. Ronald Reagan, running in a neighboring state, received 22 per cent of the vote, and Gov. Rockefeller, who is supposed to be Mr. Nixon's declared challenger, received only five per cent, though write-ins were required.

Since Gov. Reagan has locked up the California Republican ballot, Mr. Nixon has reached the end of his primary election trail with no bad marks. The Democratic primary in California will furnish the next excitement, but the man who is not on the ballot — Hubert Humphrey — could emerge a winner there as he did in Oregon.

normal and understandable. Many of us in this generally affluent area would swear that there is no poverty problem in most of Wisconsin.

But the current national concern over poverty in this country should motivate all of us to take a second look at the problem in our home areas. If that second look proves there is no problem, so much the better. If it proves the problem to be of limited scope, then the solution should be fairly simple. But if there is real poverty in our midst and we are closing our eyes to it, then we are not living up to our responsibilities as citizens.

But Dr. Dykstra's book also shows the competition between the cattlemen and the farmers that didn't really rely upon squatters' rights or stampedes. He quotes one farm leader as saying, "If I can make money out of this cattle trade, I am not afraid of Spanish fever, but if I can't make any money out of the cattle trade, I am damned 'raid of the Spanish fever."

And so the cattle towns grew up and as long as they made money for people, they lasted. The Chisholm and Sante Fe trails, Abilene, Wichita and Dodge City, some less well remembered such as Ellsworth and Candwell, all had their day in history.

And as for making money? They still do. How would the movie and television industries have survived without them? Dare we concede that Matt Dillon was a profiteer or Bat Masterson a capitalist?

Public Service in Leisure Time

A year-long study by the Southern California Research Council has concluded that within 17 years most Americans will have to work only six months of the year to maintain the same standard of living they now enjoy. This may seem silly to be concerned about but it could be a real tragedy in American life.

Despite the constant pressure for a shorter work week and longer vacations, many Americans are obsessed with the old Puritan ethic that work is good for the body and soul and that doing anything else is somehow not quite as worthy. But instead of finding something else for spare time that is worthy, too many Americans rely on television or casual recreation. And this puts a tremendous burden, not only upon our inadequate recreational facilities, but upon the individual's self-respect and peace of mind.

In a report, the Research Council pointed to "Aristotle's precept that leisure is the first principle of all action, so leisure

ABC Program Being Sponsored by Appleton People, Outside Help

Editor, Post-Crescent:

As the instigator of the Appleton ABC Program, I sense that there is a great deal of misunderstanding which needs to be clarified.

The purpose of ABC is to give boys and girls of superior academic potential and good moral character who come from disadvantaged neighborhoods with poor school systems an opportunity to obtain high quality secondary education in preparation for college.

ABC is not a Lawrence University project. It is a program under the leadership of a board of directors that includes four officers and a legal adviser and of a community structure of ten committees that is responsible for such items as finance, community relations, selection, housing, host families, student life, health, resident tutors, school liaison and school activities. Each committee has either a chairman or co-chairmen. Nine of the ten committees are headed by citizens of Appleton who have no affiliation with Lawrence.

Most but not all, of the students will be Negro since that group has the greatest need of a better chance. This racially mixed group of students will be screened through a four-stage process:

1—They are nominated by better than 600 ABC resource persons throughout the United States; i.e., teachers, guidance counselors, social workers, settlement house workers, etc.

2 — They are then screened by the Independent Schools Talent Search Program, an ABC affiliate in Boston, Massachusetts.

3—They are chosen by the Appleton Selection Committee. This selection process is already under way and should be completed by the end of the first week in June.

4—Those students selected to come to Appleton in September must perform well in an ABC summer program before the decisions are final. Boys will be prepared for entry into the Appleton school system at Dartmouth College; girls at Carleton College.

There are two plans currently under consideration, Plan A and Plan B. Under Plan A there will be ten boys, all juniors, who will live in a dormitory (a large house rented by ABC) with two resident tutors (college students) and a resident supervisor (a guidance counselor from Appleton East) and his family. At least one of the tutors will be Negro. The primary purpose of the tutors will be leadership by example; i.e., to help the ABC students realize that it is possible for someone from a disadvantaged neighborhood (and a minority group) to go to college. Five of the boys will attend West high school; five will attend East high school. The annual budget will be approximately $30,000, two-thirds of which will be paid by ABC, one third by contributions in cash or kind from Appleton citizens.

No tax dollars will be involved. Tuition at the high schools will be paid by ABC.

Under Plan B, there will be nine boys and six girls, all juniors, with three boys and two girls attending each high school, namely West, East, and Xavier. The nine boys will reside in a dormitory as described in Plan A. Each of the six girls will reside in licensed private homes as foster children. Already thirty-four families have volunteered to be host families! The budget under Plan B is approximately $39,000. ABC will again supply two thirds of the cost, the remainder coming from contributions from Appleton citizens. Once again, no tax dollars will be involved and tuition will be paid by ABC. The program under both plans involves a two-year commitment by Appleton and ABC.

The ABC students are expected to excel academically and to be reasonably active in school and community activities. Since the program's inception five years ago, the dropout rate has been 14 per cent, one third the national average.

All of us involved in the ABC Program feel strongly that it provides an opportunity for service and for involvement in one of the gravest problems facing our country and that contact with young people from minority groups will be an enriching experience for us and for our children. I would welcome the opportunity to discuss ABC and its implications with any citizen of this community.

City Should be Proud To be Picked for ABC

Editor, The Post-Crescent:

The recent proposal that a referendum be taken to determine whether or not the Appleton Public Schools will participate in the proposed ABC (A Better Chance) Program is the product of a misconception about the program, and also seeks to establish a dangerous precedent in the operation of public school systems.

The program is designed to aid students in getting an education which will aim them toward college and higher achievements. The requirements are that these students come from backgrounds which would not encourage educational advancement, whether because of poverty or attitudes of the environment, and that these students show definite talent and ability to succeed. Certainly there is nothing wrong or offensive with this idea — it is the basis of public school education.

So far, ABC students have achieved well in many private and public secondary schools, and in colleges and universities. Seventy-five percent of these students have been black, because as a group in this country, black students best qualify for the program. Enthusiastic reports from participating schools show that practically all ABC students have been valuable additions to their respective schools. The students will have been carefully screened before and during their spending a summer session at Dartmouth College. Those selected for the Appleton schools will be chosen by a group of Appleton citizens. It is a privilege for Appleton to be counted in the group of school systems considered of high enough standards to meet the needs of this program.

The proposed referendum seeks to have the public approve or disapprove the presence of ten needy students in the Appleton school system.

The students will be living in a house on which local taxes will be paid. They will be recognized by the school system as non-resident students. Their tuition will be paid by the ABC program and local donations, not by local taxpayers. In such a situation, they are perfectly eligible to attend the Appleton Public Schools. If the public can determine what eligible students will be allowed to actually attend the schools in this case, on the basis of economic background and, no doubt, race, then the precedent has been established by which, in similar fashion, the public can also exclude Poles, Indians, Mormons, or the children of garbage men.

In addition, public schools are public accommodations, and thus fall under the jurisdiction of various civil rights laws. Such a referendum, seeking to exclude certain eligible students, would undoubtedly be unconstitutional.

Educators have pointed out that classes made up of students of relatively equal ability and coming from different backgrounds are among the most highly stimulated and exciting classes they have seen. Their studies have shown that the educational levels in such classes increase significantly, particularly when compared to classes composed of students from a similar background. Hence classes which are racially mixed or economically mixed are educationally more sound than those classes which are not so mixed.

ABC represents a tremendous opportunity for Appleton to participate in a program which will benefit ten students who deserve a better chance, and which will benefit the Appleton schools by broadening the experiences of Appleton students. To close the door on ABC is to close the door on ourselves.

John S. Knight Tells How It Feels to Win A Pulitzer Prize

One of the most respected editorial page columns in the nation is written by John S. Knight for the Knight newspapers. This year Mr. Knight won a Pulitzer Prize for his writings. In the following column he tells how it feels.

Last March, columnist Sydney Harris of the Chicago Daily News was discussing the plight of a prizewinner who faded into obscurity after his one notable literary effort.

The young author's first book had made a big splash in the intellectual and academic community. Suddenly he had found himself the new darling of the Deep Thinkers.

His next effort never quite came off. He didn't expect anyone to read the first book; now he had become painfully aware of the people who were expecting the second one to be even better, or at least as good.

Sydney Harris explains this "writing block" by suggesting that the thought of the audience gets in the way of the work itself and the author is no longer writing to fulfill his own needs but to satisfy the expectations of the outside world.

I was reminded of Syd Harris' column by a recent complimentary editorial in the Wall Street Journal which said in part: "As with all careers in midstream it's possible they will not live up to the Pulitzer promise; the Durants' next book may be a disappointment and Jack Knight's next column may lack its usual pungency."

"But in this age of youth a reminder that the years cannot wither those unaccustomed to stale retirement is somehow a comfort to the middle-aged."

In our understandable delight over the Pulitzer Awards, there is likewise a reminder that editors, reporters, cartoonists and photographers should be warned by the fate of Syd Harris' friend who sought an audience and lost his flavor.

Editorials are intended to inform, to provide needed background on the issues of the day, to reason rather than instruct — to voice opinions which hopefully will invite discussion if not agreement.

When an editor is primarily interested in what other editors may think of his work, he has lost touch with the readers.

As Syd Harris says, "Even in practical terms, it is quite impossible for a serious writer to please all, or even most, of his potential audience. As soon as he becomes anxious about the public or about the critics or about scholarly reactions to his work, he begins unconsciously to try to satisfy all of these elements, and usually ends up gratifying none of them."

It is the substance of what he says — expressed with clarity and cogency — which is more important than literary style. I like to think of my own inadequate efforts as conversations with a reader.

If by the reading of an editorial, he can be stimulated into thinking about the great issues of our times, the writer is amply rewarded.

Winning a Pulitzer Award after some 50 years in journalism is indeed a gratifying experience.

Yet the winning of awards is not in itself the strength of responsible journalism. In countless American cities, good newspapers are being produced every day by news staffs which are deep in talent.

The copy editor who improves your story or writes a sparkling headline may receive no public recognition but his work is indispensable to the well-edited newspaper.

Local reporters investigating city hall or rumored shenanigans at the court house are in fact protecting the public interest.

Enterprising editors make it their business to see that public business is transacted in the open; that insurance and purchases of supplies and equipment are subject to competitive bidding.

Newspapers, unlike other print media and much of broadcasting, work for the betterment of their cities in exposure of crime and wrongdoing.

The list of public service performances by newspapers is long and impressive. Campaigns to advance civic progress, to reinvigorate local leadership, to support local taxes and levies for better schools, streets and public services, to insist that policemen, firemen and city workers receive adequate pay — these are all part and parcel of a conscientious newspaper's duty and responsibility.

To be sure, there are newspapers which "hate to get involved" or to take a firm stand on any issue which may seem to be unpopular.

Fortunately, such an outmoded concept of newspaper publishing is vanishing from the American scene. First rate editors and newsmen don't enjoy working for a mere holding operation which derives no inspiration from its owners.

But by and large, the newspaper reader in these United States is well served. Even though he may take his newspaper for granted, it is his main protection against the excesses of government and the misfeasance or malfeasance of our elected officials.

My admiration goes to the often unheralded processors of newspapers — be they in editorial, business or production departments.

For they perform the daily miracle of producing and distributing under deadline pressures a newspaper of general interest with a liberal ration of reasoned opinion.

To them, the unsung heroes of the press, I raise my glass.

Offers Help To Persons Concerned

Editor, Post-Crescent:

I would like to offer my help to those citizens who, in a recent city council meeting, indicated their concern for needy people living in and near Appleton. I would like to share in their efforts to help these people "help themselves" and want to be a part of an offering of genuine Christian love and witness. Since I am not especially interested in distributing any more boxes of used clothing or even more outdated books, I welcome their invitation to truly give of oneself — in time, energy, and brotherly love.

In the meantime, I shall continue to help in the ABC Program which is an attempt to help bright youngsters, black and white, get an education. We are trying to afford the opportunity for these young people to help themselves. We are not offering handouts — or a job, or an education. They are doing the hard part by leaving, temporarily, their families in an attempt to change their future.

Do we do as much?

Humphrey, Now on His Own, Confident About Presidency

EDNTOR'S NOTE — Hubert Humphrey, the No. 2 man in the White House, has set his sights on the Top Job. What made him decide to run for the presidency? Where does he fit in the Democratic picture? AP Special Correspondent Saul Pett traveled with Humphrey on the campaign trail for this personal look at a man who seems to be having the best time of his life running for president of the United States.

BY SAUL PETT
AP Special Correspondent

EN ROUTE WITH HUBERT HUMPHREY (AP) — Walking down a drab hotel corridor in Omaha, after another strenuous day of campaigning, the vice president of the United States suddenly clapped his hands and sang out, to no one in particular:

"I feel good! Yes, sir, I feel good! I haven't felt this good in years!"

What he felt good about, Hubert Humphrey explained later, was that he was finally out on his own and doing what he wanted to be doing, that he had come of age. He felt, he said, like the son who is finally told, after years of being in business with his father, that soon he would be running the firm.

He had given up hope of having a crack at it, but now he does, a real solid shot. And nobody could be happier than Hubert Humphrey, freed from the parental nest, now in full wing and flying like a songbird in the race to become president of the United States.

'Politics of Joy'

"My goodness, it's good to see you!" he exclaimed to an airport crowd, large or small, ecstatic or dead. And arms akimbo, high freckled dome gleaming, blue eyes popping with light even on gray days, he invites them to share with him the "politics of joy," to soar with him in what John Adams described as "the spirit of public happiness... the joy of American citizenship" involved in discussing and participating in public events.

"It's exciting to be an American! Do I love to come here! It's fun to be a Democrat; on our worst days we have more fun than Republicans. America is not sick! It is growing and changing and groping for answers but it is alive! We can do anything! The impossible dream is always being fulfilled in this country!"

So says this uncommon common man, who feels and lives between exclamation marks, this most upbeat of candidates, this old-fashioned spell-binder with the master's degree, this barefoot boy from South Dakota with the monogrammed shirts, this old-line liberal who helped pass much of the nation's social legislation and is now scorned by many liberals as a "company man," this happy salesman with the compelling, if not always contagious spirit

"I speak of the politics of hope, of a new democracy for all... You don't have to tear the party apart or the country down to build yourself up! Let's plan ahead and not relive yesterday... I am an organization man and proud of it! I run on the record of the Kennedy-Johnson administration and the Johnson-Humphrey administration. But we're going to build on it, not rest on it!"

"Let's stop talking about black power or white power and talk about people power!... Responsibility excludes deliberate divisiveness... Let's turn protest into progress!... I don't say we shouldn't talk about what's wrong in America. But let's give equal time to what's right in America! You're as old as your fears, as young as your competence, as old as your doubts, as young as your hope!"

57 Years Old

So says Hubert Humphrey, an instinctive politician of 57, ever conscious of Robert Kennedy, who is 42. Hubert Humphrey, who senses a public hunger for good news among the bad, who walks the classic tightrope of the heir of the incumbent administration, with one eye on its admirers and the other on its critics.

If, among the Democratic candidates, Robert Kennedy reminds you of an intense boy prosecutor and Gene McCarthy of a detached philosophy professor, Hubert Humphrey compels the vision of a happy oldtime drummer, liked and well-liked, who sails into town with a shine on his shoes, a smile on his face and a sample case full of notions. Trouble in River City? Sure, there's trouble in River City, folks, but it can all be fixed.

Selling unity or trombones, progress or motherhood, social idealism on the power of positive thinking, Hubert Humphrey remains eternally the happy salesman. Give him an order and he's happy. Don't give him an order and he's still happy. But try to stop him from giving his spiel and you'll surely wipe out that smile and tie him up with a double hernia.

This man, as every schoolboy must know by now, loves to talk, loves the contest, loves to campaign, loves to feel a rapport with his audience. Although he is capable of short eloquent speeches with substance and polish, he generally emerges in this campaign as far less sophisticated than Kennedy and less intellectual than McCarthy. He acknowledges the nation's problems in race, poverty, education, housing and welfare but so far has deliberately avoided specific solutions.

As of now, he apparently doesn't need to. He is the frontrunner. Kennedy is getting the frenzied crowds, McCarthy is getting the approving murmurs of the intellectuals and Humphrey is quietly collecting the people who count most before the convention, the delegates.

He can be as folksy as a backyard barbecue.

In Rawlins, Wyo.: "I want to thank you good people of Wyoming for sending Gale McGee to the United States Senate. And I want to thank Lorraine for marrying him."

In Denver: "I want you to know that Muriel is fine and getting out of the hospital soon. I know she's better because she's getting sassy again and giving me orders."

And like Kansas in August.

In Rawlins: "I've seen such wonderful children today. Children are God's testament to the future."

In Lansing, Mich.: "We talk about getting a bigger bang out of every dollar we spend for the hardware of defense. It is now time for efficiency and humanity in the hardware department."

No single example of his rhetoric typifies Hubert Humphrey in the preconvention campaign of 1968. Perhaps the one that comes closest is the "few informal remarks" he delivered to Nebraska Democrats over breakfast in Omaha. He said he wouldn't talk long because of a sore throat. He talked 40 minutes, all ad lib. Since he wasn't on the Nebraska primary ballot, he said, he wouldn't presume to tell the audience how to vote. Then, suddenly, he was painting a picture of a modern jet liner about to take off.

He talked of the storm warnings and turbulence ahead. He described the vulnerable look of a white-haired old lady boarding the plane. Also the vulnerable look of a young boy alone. And then the captain, a man with "a little gray at the temples," comes through the plane and the apprehensive passengers feel safer because they know that "if this plane has to go through a storm, this pilot and his experienced crew have flown through 1,000 storms. Now, we're going through some storms today..."

And, with the plane still warming up, Hubert Humphrey talked of the storm of social change and he talked of the ship of state and he talked about changing horses in mid-stream and just about the time it looked like he would sink in a swamp of mixed metaphors, he saw the light through the forest and rushed forward and saved the day:

"Now the pilot has said he doesn't want to fly any more. Tonight I say, don't throw out the copilot!"

The Other Humphrey

Away from the platform, away from the shrill, extroverted demands of politics, there is a quieter Hubert Humphrey, a thoughtful man with a refreshing perspective about himself and public life. This emerged during a reflective conversation on his campaign plane.

"Issues aside, why do you want to be president? What is the pull of the job?"

The vice president answered slowly, after a long pause.

"I had to ask myself that after the President made his announcement and, to be quite honest about it, I didn't know I sort of felt I ought to seek the nomination because I was the vice president and did represent the administration and because there were a number of people who looked to me to do so."

"Surely, you had thought about it before March 31?"

"Oh, yes. Then I thought also, well this may be my one great chance. I'm at a period of my life where I'm vigorous, alive and, I hope, alert, where my experience is, maybe, at its blossom. I felt maybe I was better equipped now to take on the job. But you don't really hunger for it."

"Perhaps not hunger."

"No, no, you don't do that."

It is a culmination. There is this built-in momentum in politics. It's like a magnet drawing you, if you're involved. You sort of feel that this is what you are moving toward. This is the ultimate, the climax, the center of the story of your political life.

"To be honest about it, I had often thought before about what would happen if anything happened to the President—whether or not I was really up to it, whether I had prepared myself adequately. And I really did try during these three-and-a-half years to go through a training course. If there is such a thing, which I doubt. There is some preparatory work and I went through that."

"I had really, in the past year, more or less resolved that I most likely would not be a candidate for president in '72. I felt that if I were to become president it would be one of two ways. Either the President would not run in '68, which he had indicated to me many times and which I never believed. Secondly that it would come because of disability on the part of the President. And both of these I sort of pushed aside, you know, as unrealistic."

"Why had you canceled out 1972?"

Age Question

"Several reasons. One is that after you are vice president for eight years, you're sort of worked out, worked over. You're the inheritor of so much of what has gone on before that you would have a very difficult time liberating yourself to be your own independent man. Then, I would have been 61. And I thought that the American people might feel it's all right to have a president of 61 but a candidate of that age, particularly with younger men available, might not seem exactly what they want."

"And I thought, there was no use in breaking your heart. You know, really, this is such a big thing that you've got to be sure of yourself, that you have the stamina to take it. I wasn't at all sure that in 1972, after the self-imposed discipline of eight years in the vice presidency, if that should have been my lot, with all the anonymity you have to have, the subservience that is required, that you'd be either emotionally or physically ready to do it."

"Harry Truman used to describe the presidency as a jail. Do you?"

"No. I think there is great dignity to it, a kind of beauty to it. With all its duties and responsibilities and disciplines, I believe that a man can have a life of personal fulfillment. I would hope, if I were elected, to be a president that could move with the people some. I know how difficult it is. I know the dangers to the president's physical well-being in this country."

"But I also believe this is a chance you have to take. For one's own mental, political, emotional health, you have to get around the country. I have to. Really, in politics, what's most important is your spirit."

"I noticed in that Omaha hotel you were saying aloud, but as if to yourself, how good you felt. What prompted that?"

"I was doing what I want to do."

"You feel sort of liberated?"

"Yes. I'm out on my own, so to speak, not repudiating my family but on my own. I'm like the young man that has come of age. It's like being in business with your father, and finally dad says, look, you're going to run the business, and you sort of take on a new personality. I never ever wanted to humiliate my father or hurt him. I don't want to hurt the President. I feel a great genuine affection for him. I don't want to do anything that would cause him embarrassment or undue worry. But by the same token, I now am like the man that has gone off to college. You know, I mean, it's my day."

Likes Campaigning

"You really like campaigning, don't you?"

"Yes, I like campaigning. It's got its burdens and weariness but I like it. It gives me a chance to meet many people and express my ideas and test myself against many imperfections every day. Some days you do well, some you don't. Some days you go back to your room and say, 'Oh, why did I lose that up?' Some days you say, 'I hit the ball out of the park.' You know when you do and you know when you don't and you don't need anyone to tell you. To do well, you have to have great confidence in yourself and your message. As Satchel Paige would say, your juices have to be running."

"Your juices seem to run more often than anybody I know."

"They don't always but I must say, if I have any quality which can commend itself, I do believe in what I say. I just cannot get up before an audience and sell them something I don't believe in. I sometimes believe in it so much it becomes redundant. Maybe I am overly zealous about getting my message across but it isn't because I just want to say it. It's because I want them to believe it. But a fellow has his weaknesses and one of mine is nobody enjoys it more than I do."

"Getting back to the big job, you've seen the presidency and its burdens close up. Do you ever find yourself asking yourself during the night, who am I to seek it?"

"Of course. That's why it took me time to make up my mind. But somebody has to do the job. And you have to evaluate whether or not you think you are as well prepared for it as the other fellow. Plus, you have views, convictions and where better can you fulfill those convictions than in the presidency?"

"I think that every public position is essentially a position of an educator as well as action. You're persuading, you're conditioning, you're educating and the greatest educator in America should be the president. It is a tremendous challenge and because it is, it becomes all the more interesting to you. Every part of you is challenged."

"I suppose that's part of the pull of the job."

"I'm sure it is. It's almost like, why would a man want to be an astronaut? Well, why not? If you've flown a plane, why not try space? If you've been in outer space, why not go to the moon? Particularly if you think you can handle it."

'I Think I Can Do It'

"I have seen the President make a few some decisions. That's an awfully difficult thing. It is even somewhat terrifying to watch. But somebody has to do it and I think maybe that I can do it as well as the next fellow and maybe a little better or I wouldn't be seeking the office."

"This isn't a contest between perfection and imperfection. It's a contest between imperfect men. It really is. We're—none of us has all the qualities a great nation ought to have all the time. It's a question of whether we have enough of the qualities that can add up to be a positive force in the life of the nation."

"And I guess, maybe, a man sort of immediately assesses them and says, 'Well, here's the other man, here's another man, here's another man, here's another, here am I. Now how does it stack up?' Well, you check it out and, of course, you can always come to the decision that you're the one."

"Wouldn't it be horrible to conclude there's another man better than you are?"

"Particularly in mid-stream." The vice president was laughing now. A campaign aide came forward to remind him he was going to take a nap before the next stop.

Reaction to Negro Problem Is Disappointing to Young People

Editor, Post-Crescent

To all those under the age of twenty-one:

Most of you have undoubtedly heard of the proposed ABC Program (A Better Chance) which is to be initiated into our educational system next year. You have probably also heard various pro and con arguments concerning this program, especially those of Mayor Buckley. Although Mr. Buckley stated that he couldn't take a definite stand on the proposal at the present time, his comments seemed to indicate that he felt Appletonians would not support a program of this nature.

Mr. Buckley was quoted as saying, "Just ask any mill worker (what he would think of this program.)" so that's exactly what we did. Armed with a tape recorder and not knowing exactly what to expect, we made our way to the Fox River Paper Corporation where we interviewed one of the mill supervisors. He felt that the mill workers of Appleton would not accept the ABC Program because "the majority of them would not even accept a Negro family in Appleton — they wouldn't want them as neighbors."

He added, "The people (in Appleton) have not associated with Colored people, so their prejudice is unaccounted for. The prejudice that does exist is based on what they read in the newspapers." Sensationalism, he thought, is played up in the newspapers (riots, looting, etc.) and that is the reason for Appleton's distrust for the Negro. "With a little bit of work with the newspaper this distrust could be altered." Moving into a prejudiced community like ours, he predicted, "will be rough on these ten boys." In conclusion he stated, "until they (Appletonians) see something different and see it proven different than what they have been thinking, they

Suggests Critics of ABC Help 'The Needy at Home'

Editor, Post-Crescent:

I wish to comment on the article on the opposition to the ABC program that appeared in the paper, Wednesday, May 29.

My first reaction to the argument of those who oppose allowing ten Negro students to enter our schools next fall, was that the argument "Charity begins at home" makes a lot of sense. As Mrs. Friestrom, a leader in Wachsen, Wis., Kalata and Strutz pointed out, there are many needy people within the city and surrounding area who need help. If Mrs. Friestrom and the four aldermen have been truly working toward alleviating the conditions of the needy at home and if they sincerely feel that the ABC program is thwarting their efforts, then and only then, however, do they have a good argument for opposition.

My second reaction to the argument was that the Fox Cities, an area of perhaps 100,000 people or more, can support numerous worthwhile programs. It should not be are going to feel this way (prejudiced). Someone has to break the ice."

Rather disillusioned, we decided to further investigate the opinions of several other citizens. Of all the housewives, small businessmen and other average people we interviewed, the general comment seemed to be, "why ask for trouble?" They went on to explain that although they were in favor of open housing, "Appleton certainly isn't the place for it." Also they added, "We don't owe them (Negroes) anything. Besides, the Negro hasn't shown any responsibility towards what we have given him like the tenement buildings. Look you give them a new house and it's wrecked in a year."

To conclude our investigation, we interviewed a police captain because we felt that he had direct contact with the people and could sum up the general attitude of our community. We were confronted with a completely different idea. "I don't think the people of Appleton would accept this program," he said, "because school taxes are too high, and to bring in outsiders which most likely are to be Negroes — they wouldn't want to pay this type of tax." He also felt that a program of this sort would not benefit a community like Appleton. "These colored people, at this time, do not reside in Appleton, and I don't see any reason why they should be told to come here." Another reaction to this program was to aid the Indians who are living in poverty in our own county before importing underprivileged Negroes from other areas. His general remark was that we shouldn't even bother having this program because "this whole racial situation is a lot bigger than Appleton would ever be able to accomplish."

Although we began our interview hoping to change the attitudes of the people of our conservative community, we discovered the reality that exists. Our idealistic desire isn't going to set the world on fire. Members of the older generation have formed their own ideals and attitudes and are not going to be swayed by our beliefs. They feel that our judgments are invalid because they are not based on experience. We believe that we have something more valuable than experience — we have the will to approach this problem with an open mind and to discover a practical solution.

It is up to us to preserve this attitude of acceptance. When we assume leadership of our country, we will be able to apply it to the principles we have cultivated. Every generation goes through an idealistic phase, but when they achieve a sense of security for themselves they lost contact with the problems of others. Will we be able to escape these molding forces our parents were subjected to? We seem to be the only hope for solving the racial problem. Unfortunately, all we can do is await the magic age of twenty-one when we will finally have a voice in the affairs of our government. Will we have the power to cling to our ideals or will we become slaves to the dictates of our past?

Xavier Student Says Young People Back ABC Program

Editor, Post-Crescent

I was very disappointed with the officials of Appleton when I read the article in The Post-Crescent in which some of the officials rapped the ABC project in Appleton. Appleton East and West each will receive five Negro students in the program. We, at Xavier, also are trying to receive five students.

One of the criticisms the project received was the money it would cost. It is quite evident in my mind, now, that our officials' thinking is not always right. They sponsor the building of the water pipeline to Lake Winnebago rather than to Lake Michigan. The ABC program would cost about $17,000. Building the pipeline to Lake Michigan rather than to Lake Winnebago would save the city many times more than $17,000. Where is our forward thinking?

Mrs. Friestrom has asked for a referendum on the ABC project. Let it be known that the city's high school students will be working to raise the necessary money. If a referendum were brought about, students would not have a say in the results. Due to our backward voting regulations in this state, a referendum deprives the youths of their rightful say.

Many of those who question the ABC project said we should work on the problems at home first. I am sure that these problems didn't come about all at once. Why haven't those "weekend politicians" spoken of them before now? I'm sure this ABC program will benefit the entire community. I hope the youths of our city will have their say in the program and that the whole project is a success. I further hope that some of Appleton's leaders begin to think straight for the well-being of all citizens.

Drum Corps Must Practice To Stage Good Performance

Editor, The Post-Crescent:

Outdoor practice sessions are here again for the American Drum and Bugle Corps and already we hear complaints to the point where they thought it necessary to call the police department because "practices are too noisy."

To these people I'd like to ask a few questions. Don't you enjoy a parade? If you are a native of Appleton, haven't you sort of watched for the American's in every city parade? I have since a small child.

These boys practice twice a week. To be able to put on a good performance and make Appleton really proud, they should be out there every night. They are our Good Will Ambassadors even if you don't realize it. When they go out of town on parades, people say "They're from Appleton!" Do we want them to say it with a little pride in their voices or disgust as though we could do better? If the boys don't practice this is what will happen.

If these people can't help in any other way, just try to tolerate them and don't complain. Be thankful these boys are doing something constructive.

No practices are held in the same place two nights in a row. To anyone else who enjoys these boys, show your support and stand behind them.

Drum corps teaches these boys discipline and how to follow orders. Even though they have not been a winning corps these past few years, they have learned to be "Good Sports." More boys in the city of Appleton should have these qualities.

These Drum and Bugle Corps boys need and deserve any support and help you can give them.

Life of Helping Others Ends for Helen Keller

EASTON, Conn. (AP) — Helen Keller, who triumphed over blindness and deafness to devote her life to helping those "less fortunate than myself," died Saturday at her home here. She would have been 88 June 27.

"She died gently, with a smile on her face," said Miss Keller's physician, Dr. Forry Chick. He said he had seen Miss Keller Saturday morning and "she was doing just fine" despite a slight heart attack last week.

Miss Keller was born a normal child in Tuscumbia, Ala., but was stricken by a mysterious fever which left her blind and deaf when she was 19 months old.

With the aid of her teacher, Anne Sullivan Macy, however, Miss Keller grew to be a renowned author, a friend of presidents and statesmen, and a benefactor to the handicapped of the world.

Mark Twain once wrote, "The two most interesting characters of the 19th century are Napoleon and Helen Keller."

Miss Keller died at her country estate, Arden Ridge, about five miles northeast of Westport, Conn., where she had lived quietly in recent years.

"She died peacefully and very quietly," Dr. Chick said. "It would only be right to say she died of natural causes after a prolonged illness."

The first few years of Miss Keller's life gave no clue to her later greatness. She was a wild, unruly child after she became blind and deaf, imprisoned in a world she could not communicate with.

Her father, Arthur, editor of a newspaper, sought the advice of Alexander Graham Bell who referred the Keller family to the Perkins School of the Blind in Watertown, Mass.

Anne Sullivan, the school sent a teacher—a young Irish girl who had just recovered her own sight after a series of operations.

Miss Keller later said the arrival of Anne Sullivan was "the most important day I remember in all of my life."

Their relationship was made famous in "The Miracle Worker," which appeared on television and Broadway and as a movie.

Slowly Miss Sullivan tried to break through the walls of sight and sound, working with the finger tapping manual alphabet.

graduation from college. Miss Sullivan married John A. Macy, the literary critic, and the three formed a family unit.

While continuing her writing, Miss Keller began her travels throughout the world to help the blind, travels which were to bring her international fame and honors.

Among the awards she received was the Medal of Freedom, the highest the president can bestow on a civilian. President Johnson named her one of the recipients in 1964.

Miss Keller was born a normal child in Tuscumbia, Ala., but was stricken by a mysterious fever which left her blind and deaf when she was 19 months old.

With the aid of her teacher, Anne Sullivan Macy, however, Miss Keller grew to be a renowned author, a friend of presidents and statesmen, and a benefactor to the handicapped of the world.

Mark Twain once wrote, "The two most interesting characters of the 19th century are Napoleon and Helen Keller."

Miss Keller died at her country estate, Arden Ridge, about five miles northeast of Westport, Conn., where she had lived quietly in recent years.

"She died peacefully and very quietly," Dr. Chick said. "It would only be right to say she died of natural causes after a prolonged illness."

The first few years of Miss Keller's life gave no clue to her later greatness. She was a wild, unruly child after she became blind and deaf, imprisoned in a world she could not communicate with.

Helen Keller

One day, some water from the pump spilled on Miss Keller's hand. Miss Sullivan quickly tapped out the letters of the word.

"There was a strange stir within me," wrote Miss Keller later. "I understood that it was possible for me to communicate with other people by these signs."

Swift Progress

From then on, Miss Keller's progress was swift. Although her lack of hearing had made her mute, she learned to speak, even if with difficulty.

With Miss Sullivan at her side, Miss Keller graduated cum laude from Radcliffe College in 1904. Her first book, "The Story of My Life," had already been published.

Negotiators Study Intent of Vietnamese

Bombing Demands Might be Eased To Further Talks

PARIS (AP) — The American delegation studied with interest Saturday the possibility that North Vietnam might be easing its demand for a complete bombing halt as the price for more fruitful peace talks.

North Vietnam's change in wording of its familiar demand for a bombing halt was vague, and informed sources here cautioned against placing too much hope in it. But it was noted the shift came as Ambassador Cyrus R. Vance was on his way back here from talks with President Johnson and a high member of North Vietnam's ruling Politburo was en route here from Hanoi.

The change appeared to hint that if the United States would pledge itself to end the bombing and acts of war, it might not be necessary to stop such action to permit the talks to move on to other fields. There was a vague suggestion that an agreement in principle might be acceptable.

It took only a slight change in Hanoi's wording once before to break a logjam. That was when the North Vietnamese changed "could" to "will." Hanoi had been saying that talks "could" be held if the Americans stopped the bombing. Then, in January, it said that if the Americans stopped bombing and acts of war unconditionally, North Vietnam "will enter into conversations with the United States on problems of common interest."

Scorpion Could Sustain Life For Many Days

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Under certain conditions, crewmen aboard the missing submarine USS Scorpion could survive for a "span of many days," the chief of naval operations said Saturday.

Adm. Thomas H. Moorer told a news conference large supplies and food and systems for purifying air inside the craft would enable those aboard to survive "for a considerable period of time."

But he added that the vessel must be intact and must lie in relatively shallow water. The Scorpion is capable of withstanding pressure at considerable depths, the exact figures for which are classified, he said.

Moorer said a recent signal, at first believed to have been sent by the Scorpion, could have come from anywhere. Considering the large volume of radio transmission, he said, it is not surprising that signals of this kind could be logged.

Carpenters Open New Labor Dispute

Monday when other trade union workers return to construction sites throughout northeastern Wisconsin. Jahnke said carpenters would not picket unless there is a violation of the strike. He said the union would watch to determine whether "other people" show up at job sites to do carpenters' work.

Federal mediators, probably will be contacted to set up negotiation talks, but union spokesmen said they do not expect bargaining talks to resume for at least one week.

120 Contractors

Affected by the new strike are projects of 120 contractors in 22 northeastern Wisconsin counties. And, a contractors spokesman said, the carpenters' walkout will have more far-reaching results because members of that union outnumber masons by about three-to-one and also because of the type of work carpenters perform.

Millions of dollars of construction projects are involved. A Post-Crescent survey taken early in May midway through the masons' strike indicated that strike was affecting between $70 and $100 million worth of construction. The strike area runs roughly from Fond du Lac County north to Brown County.

Many carpenters who are now on strike hadn't been working for much of the past two months because of the masons' labor dispute. Now the tables may be turned because a union spokesman said the carpenters' strike "very probably" will affect other craft union members working on construction projects.

However, he added, it will depend on the individual project. Generally the further along a construction project is, the more necessary carpenters' work becomes since finishing work is involved.

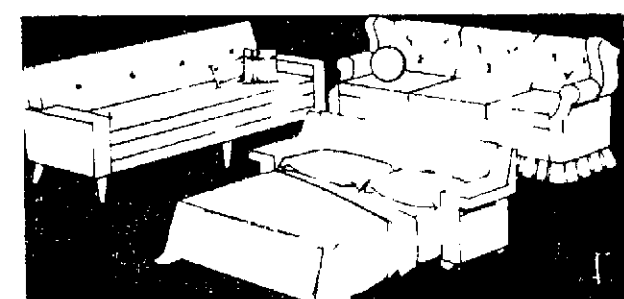

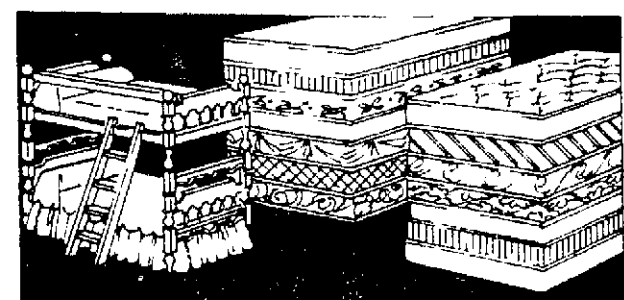

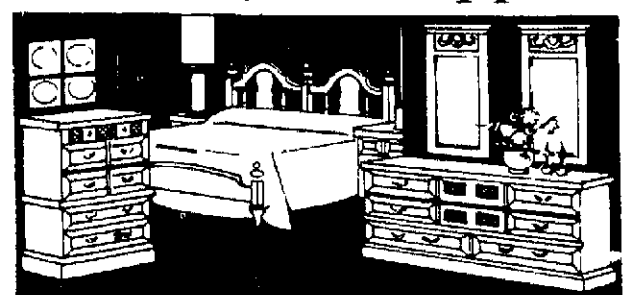

The negotiating teams which concluded bargaining talks Friday were headed by Jahnke and Van Dyke. A settlement had been sought before expiration of the old contract at midnight Friday.

The final contractors' offer called for an immediate 40-cent hourly raise, with another 20 cents to follow Dec. 1. A 60-cent hourly wage increase would have followed on June 1, 1969, and another 60-cent increase on June 1, 1970.

"This was the highest package ever offered carpenters in the history of the Fox Valley or the state," Van Dyke said.

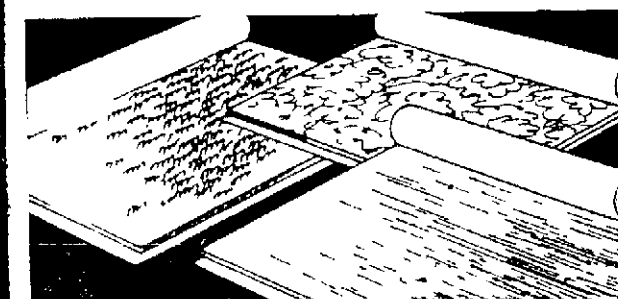

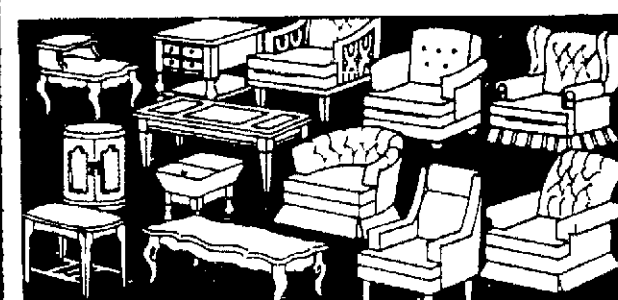

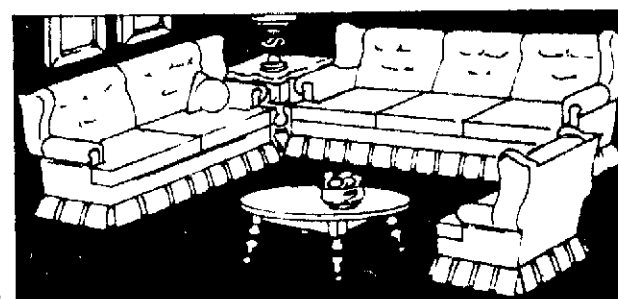

Adm. Thomas H. Moorer told a news conference large supplies and food and systems for purifying air inside the craft would enable those aboard to survive "for a considerable period of time."

Pledge of Allegiance Of Recent Origin In State Legislature

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

Post-Crescent Staff Writer
MADISON — The casual visitor in the galleries of the Wisconsin assembly, noting that the house each day recites a collective pledge of allegiance, might assume that it is one of the ancient parliamentary customs, as is the first activity of the day, the opening prayer.

Wyngaard

Actually the pledge is of recent origin, and was established through political accident.

It was in the 1961 session of the legislature, when the Republicans and the Democrats one day got into a violent floor fight about a proposed resolution to express support and approbation for the House Un-American Activities Committee in Washington. Democrats fought the idea Republicans supported it. At dinner that night one of the Republican leaders suggested a motion at next morning's session for a group pledge of allegiance. Democrats would not care to object, as the reasoning went, and, of course, they didn't. But as a result, the pledge had to be repeated the next day, in order to avoid the suspicion that the idea had been conceived to embarrass the Democrats. Having done it twice in succession, the house did it again and again, and now the act is an unwritten rule that it is observed as faithfully as those that are actually contained in the rule-book.

The hints by Lou Ceci of Cedarburg that he may run in the September primary for the Republican nomination for attorney general in defiance of the Republican convention's endorsement of Sen. Robert Warren of Green Bay probably reflected the keen disappointment at the moment of his defeat.

Such a campaign would have only an outside chance for victory, as Ceci and his friends will realize upon reflection. The principal problem will be raising money. Without a respectable campaign chest, it is virtually impossible for the candidate to reach the voter in a competitive situation now-a-days.

Donald Tewes, the former Waukesha congressman who lost by a heavy vote to Sen. Jerris Leonard for the GOP convention endorsement for U.S. senator, was undoubtedly deeply disappointed also.

But he took his shellacking in good spirit, as he amused the Republican convention with the story of the man who suffered a humiliating loss in a campaign for election for sheriff. The next day, nevertheless, he appeared on his home town streets armed with a gun. When told that he had lost the election and therefore did not have the right to wear arms, Tewes said, the defeated aspirant replied: "Anybody who has as few friends as I apparently have must wear a gun."

One of the youngest district leaders of the state Republican organization is Lawrence W. Durning, Eau Claire attorney, and candidate for district attorney there in the fall. He is the son-in-law of W. D. McIntyre, for many years a power in the politics of northwestern Wisconsin and for many years best known as the veteran head of the state university board of regents, from which he resigned voluntarily about two years ago.

The recent publicity about an effort to organize a memorial foundation in honor of the late Joseph R. McCarthy of Wisconsin recalls one of the favorite stories of the late Republican senator that has been told mostly inside Republican Party circles. The late Thomas E. Coleman was chairman of the state GOP when McCarthy won his upset election to the U. S. Senate in 1946. Coleman's right hand man was the late Victor Johnson, one of the shrewdest political managers who ever operated in this state.

Johnson was instructed to accompany McCarthy to Washington for the swearing in ceremonies, and decided to make the trip by railroad in order to have sufficient time for a review of the problems involved. One of them, Johnson warned out of a rich experience was that McCarthy would inevitably be met by a crowd of reporters who would want to interview the giant-slayer who had against almost all forecasts defeated the late Sen. Robert M. La Follette. Again and again Johnson cautioned that the senator-elect's first impressions and first quotations in print would be important in making a start in the sophisticated political circles of Washington. Saw something serious and significant, Johnson cautioned again and again.

McCarthy, the most amiable of men in those days readily agreed that it was wise counsel. But when the train pulled into the Washington station the following morning McCarthy stood down to the station platform amid a throng of reporters and remarked: "Hell it's raining."

It need to be said that the publicity man was the most important aide of a candidate for high office. Today he has probably been superseded by the campaign treasurer. As a new campaign begins, the Republican party of Wisconsin has the services of a new state committee treasurer in the person of George Kaiser who rose to prominence only a few years ago when Gov. Knowles named him commissioner of the state department of administration. He recently resigned to return to work in his profession of accountancy in Milwaukee.

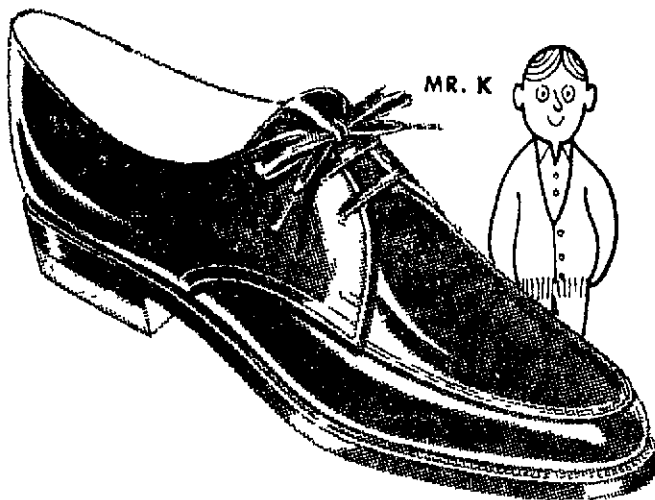

Kaiser's rise illustrates the high mobility in politics here and elsewhere. When he came to the capital three years ago he freely admitted that he had had little experience or interest in politics and public affairs heretofore. His wife was the political activist of the family. Now he holds one of the key jobs in Wisconsin organization politics.

There were some hurt feelings when the Republican national convention delegates were chosen and announced and Republican legislators learned that not a single one of their own men had been chosen. But the threat of a public protest was quietly removed after consultations with the state committee. Leading legislators will get to the convention in some capacity. Sen. Robert P. Knowles, the senate president pro tem, is in a strategic position to help as head of the arrangements committee for the Miami Beach convention.

How's Your AUTObiography?

By Sy

This column is prepared by John Sybeldan, area license examiner with the Wisconsin Department of Transportation. He and his fellow examiners will answer questions on driving sent to Sy, in care of The Post-Crescent, Box 559, Appleton Wis. They also welcome any suggestions or hints to improve driving or that aid the motorist.

Graduation parties soon will be the order of the day. In the past, an unwelcome guest often has been death. Each year a few celebrants get carried away at the wheel of a car — sometimes after drinking — and wind up being carried away after the crash. This year let's all try for a safe celebration.

QUESTION: What is an odometer?

ANSWER: It is an instrument, mounted with the speedometer, and it indicates the number of miles the car has traveled.

QUESTION: What is the proper distance at which to park away from the curb when parallel parking?

ANSWER: In parallel parking, the vehicle's right wheels shall be within 12 inches of the curb or edge of street.

QUESTION: Are police officers as hard on kids with learner permits as guys with regular licenses?

ANSWER: When you violate the law while driving you are responsible and thus subject to any penalties involved. However, I am sure the officer would consider that you are learning to drive with proper guidance. However, if your violation occurred due to carelessness — then possible is the ticket.

Each of us can make a big contribution toward cutting down our staggering highway death toll. It costs nothing and takes little effort to buckle your seat belt. This could save months of agony in a hospital. No one expects an accident, but we all can be prepared.

Four Retirements to be Marked At Lawrence Commencement June 9

BY MARGUERITE SCHMANN

Four retirements — three of them ceremonial, one of them actual — will be marked at Lawrence University's 119th commencement June 9 by a quartet of professors whose years at the institution total 95.

They are Dr. Warren Beck, novelist, critic and emeritus professor of English who concludes a 43-year career in the Lawrence classroom; Dr. Elisabeth Koffka, professor of history since 1961 when she came to Lawrence after retiring from Smith College; Dr. Kyle Ward, Jr., senior research associate at The Institute of Paper Chemistry since 1952; and Professor Bernard

E. Heselton, athletic director, former football coach and a member of the Lawrence physical education staff for 30 years.

Collectively, this group has added to Lawrence's lustre in the pages of scholarly and scientific journals, over the counters of bookstores and in the sports sections of newspapers. But far beyond their individual reputations as producers of books, articles, poems, patents and winning football teams, each has in his own way been a superb teacher.

Publicly Honored

Professors Beck and Koffka have both been publicly honored with the Uhrig prize for excellence in teaching at Lawrence, while Professor Heselton and Dr. Ward have their own private "alumni associations" that speak to their impact as teachers.

For Dr. Beck, this June marks his actual retirement. Seven years ago he received the traditional master of arts ad eundem and became an emeritus professor. For the other three, this is the ceremonial retirement when they become honorary alumni of Lawrence; all will continue in their present capacities next year.

In order to finish eight books and hundreds of shorter pieces of writing during four decades of fulltime teaching, Warren Beck has followed an iron regimen. His works include three novels, "Final Score," which won the Friends of American Writers Prize, "Pause Under the Sky," and "Into Thin Air," all brought out in England as well as America; four collections of short stories, "The Blue Sash," "The First Fish," "The Far Whistle," and "The Rest is Silence," and a book of literary criticism, "Man in Motion: Faulkner's Trilogy." Dr. Beck is reticent about discussing works in progress, but it is known that he has been working on a major study of James Joyce's "The Dubliners" in the past several years.

His short stories have been included in 16 anthologies including "The Best American Short Stories" for 1939, 1943, 1946 and 1950, in "The Best of the Best American Short Stories, 1915-50," several regional anthologies and three college texts. At one time the editor of Story Magazine noted that Beck had contributed to that magazine more frequently than any other writer except William Saroyan.

Studied Faulkner

Dr. Beck has studied the writings of William Faulkner for more than a score of years and wrote some of the earliest criticism in praise of Faulkner. Several of these works have been reprinted in anthologies, including two in France.

Although Beck's full teaching career has been spent at Lawrence, he has ranged far beyond the campus during sabbatical leaves and summer vacations. For eight summers he taught at the Bread Loaf Graduate School of English, Middlebury College; at other times he has been on the faculty of the U.S. Army University, Shrivenham, England; Connecticut College for Women; the Universities of Minnesota and Colorado; and has lectured or served at writers conferences at another 20 institutions. He has held grants from the Rockefeller and Ford Foundations, the American Council of Learned Societies, and has several times been a guest at the Yaddo Writers Colony. Beck is an alumnus of Earlham College, which also gave him an honorary doctorate, and he holds a master's degree from Columbia University.

One of Dr. Beck's colleagues in the English department says, "He evokes from others the scrupulous responses he demands from himself. His insistence on confronting a person, a work of art, or an idea for the thing it is, meeting it in its particularity, has created his rich and precise critical assessments and the firm affection his students and colleagues hold for him. He is able to show the intricate ironies below the surface of a Frost poem or the clear thematic lines of a labyrinthine Faulkner novel; academic discussions take sharp focus when he enters them. No talk with him is small. In any age his wise respect for the individual would be valuable; in an age when the singular is everywhere shouted by the collective or is foolishly confused with the eccentric, it is irreplaceable."

Well-Known Coach

One of the best known faculty members on any campus, as far as the public is concerned, is the football coach, and this is particularly true of Bernard Heselton. He guided Viking gridiron fortunes from 1938 through 1964, and in that time produced six Midwest Conference championship squads, three runners-up and numerous contenders.

His overall Lawrence record was 111 wins, 78 losses and five ties. Among his championship teams of 1938, 1942, 1946, 1947, 1949 and 1951 there were four undefeated squads.

friends; they graphically illustrate his ambition to build solid citizens as well as solid championship contenders."

30 Years at Smith

Dr. Elisabeth Koffka came to the Lawrence campus after more than 30 years on the faculty of Smith College. She is the widow of Dr. Kurt Koffka, one of the three founders of the important gestalt school of psychology.

who headed a Hamburg Gymnasium. In this country, both Smith College and Lawrence University have profited from her vigorous teaching. Her unflagging enthusiasm and historical insights have propelled more people than even she can count into a more sensitive understanding of the Big Questions. She decks the bones of history with life and peoples the past with living ideas. Her course in modern European Intellectual History has always been one of the most popular of our department's offerings. We are indeed fortunate that Mrs. Koffka, having retired now from two colleges, is really not the retiring type and will still be with us part-time next year."

Significant Figure

A significant figure in the international world of science is that of Kyle Ward, whose profession has many times taken him across the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans. After 10 years as secretary, he was elected president of the Pulp, Paper and Board Section of the Applied Chemistry Division of the International Union of Pure and Applied Chemistry, in a meeting held last fall in Prague, Czechoslovakia.

Ward has held many responsibilities at the Institute: he has been senior research associate (equivalent to full professor); chief of the cellulose group; chairman of the chemistry department; lecturer in cellulose chemistry; director of the Industry Seminar, a program in continuing education; and has been in charge of planning and supervision of both fundamental and cooperative research and of student doctoral thesis research.

Dr. Ward had an equally wide-ranging career before joining the Institute staff in 1952. Holder of degrees from the University of Texas, George Washington University and the Friedrich Wilhelms University in Berlin, he worked as a research chemist with the Hercules Powder Company in New Jersey, Delaware and Germany from 1929-36. A portion of his German stay was spent completing his doctorate. For two years he was with the Chemical Foundation of Washington, D.C., and then with the Department of Agriculture's Bureau of Chemistry and Soils, also in Washington.

When the Department of Agriculture established the Southern Regional Research Laboratory in New Orleans in 1939, he became head of the Cotton Fiber Division. In the course of his career he has written, co-authored or edited more than 70 scientific publications and patents, including a book "Chemistry and Technology of Cotton," brought out by Interscience Publishers.

Among Leaders

Dr. Ward has been sectional and divisional chairman in the American Chemical Society, associate editor of the Textile Research Journal, was named among the 10 leading cellulose chemists by the Chicago section of the American Chemical Society, was given certificates of appreciation and merit by the U.S. Department of the Army and the City of New Orleans. He is listed in five different "Who's Who's" or professional directories.

Because of the international student body at the Institute, and because Dr. Ward's supervision of student doctoral theses often resulted in joint authorship of articles with his students, his publication list makes exotic reading. A few of his co-authors have been Kei Matsuzaki, Chen-Chuan Tu, Yasuo Ohno and Maija Lakstigala. Dr. Ward keeps in touch with many of his former students scattered around the globe, and his professional trips to Europe or the Orient often have personal overtones.

Bohrod Reception

MILWAUKEE — Aaron Bohrod, artist in residence at the University of Wisconsin, Madison campus, will be guest of honor at a meet-the-artist reception at Irving Galleries, 400 E. Wisconsin Ave., from 2 to 5 p.m. today.

Dr. Beck

Dr. Koffka

Dr. Ward

Prof. Heselton

He won second place honors in '48, '52 and '54. His 14-game winning streak in 1951 and 1952 was third longest in the nation at that time. The 1947 team ranked sixth nationally on defense and 15th on offense, for both large and small colleges, and placed seven men on a 12-man Midwest Conference honor squad.

At the time Bernie stepped out of the coach's role, there were only seven coaches at the 520 institutions comprising the National Collegiate Athletic Association whose seniority equalled his 27 years, and only two who had been at their institutions longer than he had.

Heselton, a University of Minnesota alumnus, has also coached wrestling and golf at Lawrence, accounting for more than his share of conference crowns in each.

Bernie has produced four of Lawrence's six Little All-American football choices: end Claude Radtke, '49; full-back Bruce Bigford, '52 second team; and Charles "Sal" Cianciola, second team both in '53 and '54; and Joe Lamers, honorable mention in '61. Two other Heselton-coached griders made national statistics: Dick Miller was the highest scoring tackle in the nation in 1942 with 25 points, 19 of them points after touchdown. In 1961, Gary Just, a junior quarterback, set a new small-college record of eight field goals in one season.

Tough Decision

From a professional standpoint, perhaps the most difficult thing Bernie has ever done was to step aside voluntarily as football coach after the 1964 season, particularly since all systems were "go" on the Lawrence gridiron at the time. A team was coming up that looked as though it was going to develop into a championship outfit (and under coach Ron Roberts it did); and Heselton's long-cherished dream of a football bowl was coming into being in the ravine next to Whiting Field. Yet this was the time he chose to hand over the team and the bowl to a younger man and to concentrate on the athletic directorship, to which he had been appointed in 1961.

Charles "Sal" Cianciola, now sales manager of the Western Division of Wisconsin Tissue Mills, Menasha, and one of the few four-year lettermen in Lawrence's history, paid this tribute:

"Bernie Heselton was a master strategist. He had the ability to appraise the strengths and weaknesses of the opposition and to apply tactics appropriate to the abilities of his team. His energetic dedication to his institution, to his principles, to his teams and to his players as individuals is remembered by generations of Lawrence students. His former athletes have become his lifelong

About 70 Works Included

John E. Costigan Exhibition Opened at Paine Center Saturday

OSHKOSH — About 70 oils, watercolors, drawings and prints by 80-year-old artist John E. Costigan went on display Saturday at the Paine Art Center here.

The show, which Center Director Richard N. Gregg terms "a major retrospective display," will continue through July 14. Thereafter, it will tour the nation until mid-1970, under the auspices of the Smithsonian Institution traveling exhibition service.

Costigan has lived on a farm near Orangeburg, N.Y., for the past 50 years, although he is a native of Rhode Island, having been born at Providence on Feb. 29, 1888. A leap year baby, Costigan was born just three blocks from the birthplace of his first cousin, the legendary George M. Cohan.

Orphaned in 1900, Costigan went to New York City three years later, where he obtained a job with a lithographing firm which did poster work for the Cohans. In 28 years with the firm, Costigan's salary rose from $4 a week (as press boy) to $50 a day (as sketch artist).

He married Ida Blessin in 1919. She was an active sculptress in the 1920s and early '30s. They raised five children, who in turn produced 11 grandchildren.

Costigan's first professional recognition came in 1920 when he won an award at the National Academy of Design, but his first major breakthrough occurred in 1922, when he won a purchase prize at the Art Institute of Chicago.

Costigan's work was brought to the attention of Nathan Paine (founder of the Paine Art Center), who subsequently became a patron and friend. In 1928, Paine acquired "Woman With Goats," which is printed in color on the exhibition catalogue's cover.

The catalogue has a forward by William E. Woolfenden, director of the Archives of American Art, Detroit. Also appearing are an article by Gregg on the artist, a listing of the items in the show, a chronology, a tabulation of national awards and museums owning his work.

In the forward to the catalogue, Woolfenden praised Gregg and his work at Paine, which has, "during the past years, made a notable contribution to our knowledge of American art through a series of remarkable exhibitions. These exhibitions ... have explored or re-examined artists whose work was unknown or only partially known. ... The present exhibition is an example of these exploratory shows and offers us an excellent opportunity to study the oils, watercolors, drawings and prints of ... Costigan, whose work has not been seen in a large exhibition for the past 25 years."

Included in the show are the two 1960 works reproduced in color on this page. "Group of Bathers" is a gouache, which measures 21 by 26 inches. "Autumn Woodland" is an oil on canvas, with dimensions of 34 by 40 inches. The former was loaned by Max Safran, New York; the latter by Costigan.

The Paine Art Center is open Tuesday through Sunday from 2 to 5 p.m. Although children are not permitted to enter the Center, they are free to tour the gardens.

At Valley Fair AGA Art Fair Drew Hundreds

Hundreds of exhibitors and spectators — ranging from the creative to the simply curious — thronged the mall of Valley Fair Shopping Center last Saturday and Sunday as the Appleton Gallery of Arts sponsored its annual Art and Craft Fair and Workshop.

Held under the co-chairmanship of Paul Volpe and Mrs. Judson Fowler, the Fair drew participation by some 74 artists and craftsmen, representing 21 Wisconsin communities.

In addition to the oil and watercolor paintings displayed on peg-boards the length of the mall, there were sketching demonstrations and stichery, jewelry, pottery and even flowers for sale.

A total of $1,150 worth of works were sold.

A United States Army exhibit featuring 20 reproductions of combat art will be on display in the lobby of the student union at St. Norbert College, June 7, 8 and 9. The display, open to the public, is sponsored by the United States Army Reserve Officers Training Corps at the college.

The exhibit, entitled "U.S. Army — a Heritage of Freedom," features battle scenes from all wars in which the United States has participated. Regular Army personnel will be on hand to answer visitors' questions.

New Abatement Orders Puzzle 'Mini-Polluters'

BY CLIFF MILLER
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

What does gigantic Kimberly-Clark Corp. have in common with little Hicplas Dairy Farms, Inc.? How do Brookside Cheese Factory, Coenen Packing Co., and Pleasant View Cheese Factory wind up keeping company with Neenah Foundry, Inc., and the other big manufacturers of the Fox River Valley's paper-making community?

They're all polluters, according to recent abatement orders handed down by the state's Department of Natural Resources.

And they're all subject to the same basic philosophy expressed recently by Freeman Hol-sulphite mill, while they feel their recent installation of treatment facilities at the Lake-the plight of the manufacturers who have been told to clean up their operations, and quit contributing to the pollution of the Fox River.

Adequate treatment of manufacturing waste to prevent pollution of the state's natural waterways, he said, is considered "a cost of doing business."

He equated the cost of treatment to the costs of raw materials or of paying a minimum wage.

The question posed by the clean-up orders, then is whether the producers — large and small alike — can keep producing but stop polluting.

It seems doubtful that Kimberly-Clark, Neenah Foundry or any of the other big manufacturers are going out of business because of the abatement orders. K-C officials have said they plan to close the Kimberly-Clark, Neenah Foundry or any of the other big manufacturers are going out of business because of the abatement orders. Resurrection in Washington

Poor People Flounder in Mud, Doubt, Desperation

BY FRANCES MCKUSICK
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

WASHINGTON — Several months ago, when the late Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. SCLC official and "mayor" of Resurrection City, the program was heralded as a new dynamic approach to obtain Congressional action on poverty problems.

Today, less than three weeks after the first members of the Poor People's campaign set up comfortable heated motel housekeeping in "Resurrection City," where they watched television.

Net Result

The net result of this was that Abernathy did spend a night at Resurrection City, experiencing penetrating cold and dampness in an unheated, hastily erected shack, as had the Poor People for over a week.

After that, appeals were made for accommodations in churches in the suburbs and in Washington itself.

But that only told a part of the story of the discontent among the residents of the city.

When censorship was finally lifted from the poor people, I decided to go "to the source" to find out exactly how things were coming along in the campaign.

So when a group of about 200 poor people stormed the steps of the Supreme Court Building to protest a ruling handed down this week revoking fishing permits of West Coast Indians, I went over to talk to the demonstrators.

Mingles With Crowd

Leaving notebook and pencil behind, and posing as a curious tourist, I mingled with the crowd, observing and asking questions.

Some of the things I saw and learned were enough to turn your stomach. Some things were tragic and pitiful, and some things informative.

In short, I learned that Resurrection City was a town of many faces.

First, the garb in which the poor people were attired showed

Traffic Clogs Communities In Waupaca

Tourist Season Rush Carried on Roads Through the Cities

BY ROGER PITT
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

NEW LONDON — Highways in this area hit their peak traffic load this weekend as the tourist season had its traditional Memorial Day opening.

Waupaca County attracts heavy tourist travel on U.S. Highways 10 and 45 and State Highways 54, 110, 22 and 49.

Future plans for U.S. 45 bypassing New London and Clintonville are expected to help alleviate the traffic problems in those cities. However, Waupaca's problems are compounded by State Highways 54, 22 and 49 which go through the heart of the city. U.S. 10 now bypasses Waupaca but the traffic situation in the city has not been eased to any extent.

Larger Season

Law enforcement officials from the county's three largest communities agreed the tourist season will be a busy one.

Fond du Lac Schools To be Flexible Units, With Team Teaching

BY DOUG KOPLIEN
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

FOND DU LAC — Classrooms without walls, no grades and a team teaching system will be characteristic of two new schools being proposed in Joint School District No. 1 here.

Washington School, which has been handling over 300 students now, will be replaced by a smaller but more flexible building to take care of students from kindergarten to third grade.

Roosevelt School, now an abandoned junior high school, being used partially for some administrative offices, will be replaced with a 500 capacity facility that will handle children from kindergarten through sixth grade.

Supt. of Schools Ludwig A. Petersen explained that team teaching has been in use in some schools for several years. It is only through the building of new, more flexible facilities that the concept can be instituted throughout the district.

Wednesday night he will approach the joint appropriating authority made up of the seven Fond du Lac city councilmen and chairmen from the townships of Fond du Lac, Empire, Taycheedah, Bryon and Eden, to ask for an additional $80,000 to complete the construction of the Washington School.

In the past Petersen has met opposition from members of the appropriating authority who have charged that Fond du Lac is paying more for its schools than any other municipality in the Fox River Valley. When $225,000 was asked for to build the Washington School, the request was chopped to $200,000, and according to Petersen, "If the cost of labor had not jumped the way it did, $225,000 would have been enough."

Although the Washington School will be built first, Roosevelt School is being planned to complement the former's operation.

Petersen explained that at the present time Washington handles all seven grades, but under the new concept it will take the last four grades and Roosevelt will handle the upper grades.

Police Car Torpedoes Boat on Land

MENASHA — A police squad car torpedoes a boat Saturday afternoon on dry land.

Officers said the 14-foot boat, being towed on a trailer, was flipped onto the pavement, 75 horsepower motor and all. Resulting damage was estimated at $1,800 to the boat, motor and trailer, and $200 to the front of the police cruiser.

Police said the squad car, operated by officer Roy Rollins, was heading east on Third Street when a car pulling the boat and trailer turned left in front of the squad car at the Plank Road, Mantowoc Street and Third Street intersection.

Clement J. Weinandt, Jr., 22, 112 Milwaukee St., was listed as driver of the car and owner of the boat was listed as Michael Goss, 1168 Manitowoc Road.

Nobody was reported hurt.

Rural Seymour Girl Hurt in 2-Car Crash

A rural Seymour girl suffered a deeply cut knee about 10 p.m. Saturday when her auto and one driven by Robert J. Pautz, 26, 1317 W. Prospect Ave., Appleton, collided at W. Spencer and S. Mason streets.

La Vahn Barclay, 21, route 3, was advised to seek a doctor's aid. Police said she was driving west on Spencer and Pautz was northbound on Mason.

Mother Needs Her Sons How Big a Sacrifice?

BY CHUCK DILDAY
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

NEW LONDON — There are 85 acres on the farm and 40 head of cattle that must be fed and watered and milked and cared for.

The 15-year-old boy has to get up at five o'clock in the morning and many times it is after 11 o'clock at night before he gets to bed with as much of the farm work done as possible.

You see, he is a sophomore in high school, too, and he maintains a full class schedule.

His widowed mother helps as much as she can and the two of them have managed to keep things going, but they don't know how long they can keep it up.

That's how it is with Mrs. Harold Morack and her son, Wayne, who live on Outagamie County Trunk S about three miles from New London.

Emergency Leave

At least, that is the way things were until just a few days ago when Wayne's older brother, Steve, who is 20-years-old, managed to get an emergency leave from the Army.

Now there is another pair of hands to help with chores and another set of shoulders to help bear the burden. And the field commander of Steve's military unit will grant the hardship discharge he has requested so he can continue to help keep the family together.

It seems only right that the military should relax a bit for the Moracks.

You see, Mrs. Morack's oldest son, Gene Charles, who was 23, was killed in action in Vietnam the day after Mother's Day. And her second son, Harold John, is hospitalized with a nervous disorder incurred during his service with the Marines.

Yes, Mrs. Morack has given a great deal. Maybe it is time for the Army to give her son back to her.

Sen. William Proxmire thinks so.

Lasting Peace Aim For Marian Grads

Dr. Henken Predicts Demise of Passive, Apathetic Students

FOND DU LAC — Dr. Willard Henken, dean of the Fond du Lac campus of the Wisconsin State University-Oshkosh, Saturday, told the 67 graduates of Marian College that the most immediate challenge facing them is to build a lasting peace.

This was the first commencement in the new Marian College commons and the second on the $7 million 28-acre campus which was completed this year.

Dr. Henken said, "Even if the Vietnam war would end tomorrow it would be impossible to abolish tensions among nations, but I believe it is possible to create procedures and institutional arrangements that will keep those tensions within safe bounds."

"By the year 2,000 there will be an estimated 7.5 billion people in the world and we must view the problems of these people as our problems. We must be willing to expand our efforts to share our knowledge, technical skills and human and material resources," Dr. Henken said.

Alleviate Inequities

"History will not deal kindly with the richest country in the world," he continued, "if it cannot bring its great wealth to bear in alleviating the social and economic inequities that exist within its boundaries because of bigotry, prejudice, and discrimination."

"I am thoroughly convinced that all thinking Americans are concerned about the economic and social injustices in our society. However, I am also convinced that violence, vandalism, lawlessness and wanton destruction are not going to bring about needed changes."

"There is and always has been a place in our society for responsible dissent that has its aim within the framework of the law, but total destruction of our society because all laws are not just carries the danger of a reaction bordering on totalitarianism."

Not Mourn Passing

"Let me hasten to say that I would not stifle dissent or disagreement but all too often those who appear to champion rights deny to others by their action those same rights," he said.

Dr. Henken predicted the passing of the passive and apathetic student body and said, "I cannot mourn their passing."

"Students are rightfully concerned that our burgeoning universities are becoming increasingly impersonal, professors are becoming more concerned with research and less with teaching and that all too often that curriculum content in general and course content in particular does not come to grasp with the vital issues of our time."

"Individuality is being surrendered to bureaucratic procedures and the computer. Young people want to be involved in matters that will have a profound effect on their lives."

"Meaningful student involvement is desirable and their inquisitive mind, concern, enthusiasm and boundless energy can and must be brought to bear in helping to build a better society," Dr. Henken told the graduates.

Loose Sight

"I think we sometimes lose sight of the virtues that have made our country great," he continued, "such as honesty, respect, integrity, compassion, morality, thankfulness and reverence. It would seem that the current disenchantment among our young people is because we oldsters do not practice what we preach in this regard."

"Education must strive to re-establish educational and intellectual credibility in moral standards."

"Whether we like it or not we are becoming citizens of a world society and must be prepared to understand and appreciate people who differ from us in appearance, thinking and actions."

Equal Opportunities

"We must create educational systems that will provide learning experiences which will make profitable a maximum individual fulfillment."

"We cannot tolerate large segments of our society being denied equal opportunities to realize their full potential because of a quirk, pigmentation or accident of birth."

It Was Hot in Albee

Hall during WSU-O commencement exercises Saturday morning, and this graduate, after years of long labor to get his degree, took time out for a siesta. He awoke in time to accept his sheepskin. The ceremony, originally scheduled for Jackson Street Athletic Field, was transferred to the gymnasium when weather seemed ominous Saturday morning.

Center Takeover Likely, According to State Officials

OSHKOSH — The state legislature could soon hear and accept a proposal that the state take over the operation of all two-year university center institutions in the state, according to Assembly Majority Leader Harold V. Froehlich, R-Appleton.

"More and more legislators are saying that higher education is the responsibility of the state and that the state should be assuming total cost of its operation," Froehlich said this week.

Winnebago and Outagamie counties are presently pondering the future of the University of Wisconsin-Fox Valley Center, and the idea of the state taking over the operational costs of the institution has been proposed.

'Wait and See'

The Outagamie County Board voted on May 14 to turn the center over to the state Coordinating Committee for Higher Education (CCHE), providing that Winnebago County does the same.

Winnebago County has not yet taken any action, although a recent meeting of the center trustees, two from each county, led to a decision to present a resolution before each county board urging the state to take over all center systems.

Winnebago County Trustee Orin King said it is possible that he and Supv. Oliver M. Thomson, the other trustee from Neenah, would simply present a report at the June board meeting recommending the county continue operation of the center as it is now and wait for the state to take some action.

Sees More Pressure

"I doubt, myself, that the state will want to take over the construction cost of a new center," King said, "but they may want to take over the operation of the center as it is now."

King predicted that more pressure would be put on state legislators' next session to take over all university center operations.

Froehlich echoed this opinion, adding at the same time that new centers in other localities would be hard to come by if the state took over their operation. "It will be hard for any community to ask for and receive a center if the system is taken over by the state," he predicted.

Froehlich said he would favor legislative action to allow the state to take over center operations, but cautioned that the final decision would have to depend on the state's financial situation.

"If there are increases in state taxes," the assemblyman said, "there's probably a good chance the idea will be accepted. If there is not, it would be hard to sell."

Angus Rothwell, executive director of the major decision making body for state educational systems, the CCHE, said he "wouldn't be surprised to see the state taking over center operations."

"More and more, the state will assume responsibilities of all higher education," Rothwell said, "because these institutions draw students from a much wider area which cuts across local community boundary lines."

Rothwell noted that the CCHE is currently making a study of the center system operation throughout the state.

He noted that counties supporting two-year institutions pay construction, maintenance and other costs of the institutions themselves, while costs for operation of state and UW universities are footed by the entire state on an equal basis.

"More uniform policies among the schools are needed," Rothwell said.

Froehlich said he thought counties would have to deed the centers to the state, title free, if the idea was to get through the legislature.

Newton Minow Speaker

WSU-O Graduates Told: Get Involved

"Non-involvement" in today's crucial issues "may not be quite so dangerous as LSD," Newton Minow, former chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, told Wisconsin State University graduates Saturday, "but it too has hallucinatory powers."

Minow challenged the 567 graduates at the 94th annual spring commencement exercises to become actively involved in seeking solutions to today's issues.

"An uncommitted life is not worth living," he said.

'Need Many Teachers'

Stressing the importance of teachers in the shaping of tomorrow's world, Minow noted that by 1970 one out of two college graduates would need to enter the teaching profession to maintain the present classroom ratio standard of one teacher for every 30 students.

He noted other areas of growth in education, including growing enrollments, greater educational expenditures and new teaching ideas resulting from the "technological explosion."

"Our society is on the way to becoming school centered," he said.

For those going on to teaching careers, he noted, the adventure will be "good for you and your nation only if you see the times clearly."

He noted that change in the past has often been ruinous and destructive, and that "changes on university campuses recently have been destructive."

Cities Kennedy Plea

"Whether changes in the future will be constructive or not," he said, "will depend in large part on the teachers of tomorrow."

He noted that the late president John Kennedy, once asked that teachers be sensitive to human needs.

"In the spirit of John Kennedy," he said, "I would ask you to commit yourselves to finding solutions to the problems of our times," including poverty, ignorance and hunger.

"But don't expect fast solutions," he told the graduates.

Minow, who is well-known for statements which accused broadcasters of failing to present more public service programs, said he hoped some of the graduates present "will become involved in a marriage of education and the new technology, particularly television."

"Education has been the slowest part of our society to understand the new technology," he said. "Teachers must grasp the new technology and turn it to the service of mankind."

Minow cited a hypothetical set of statistics to illustrate the extent of poverty, hunger and other problems confronting today's world.

The ceremonies held in Albee Hall also witnessed the presentation of alumni association awards to Miss Merle Pickett, assistant principal of Washington Junior High School in Manitowoc, and Robert M. Kolf, Oshkosh, retired WSU-O teacher, coach and athletic director.

They were presented by alumni association president Ralph Nielson.

A Citizen's Advisory Council award was presented to Carl E. Steiger for his role as business, civic and educational leader. It was presented by council president Mrs. Philip Nielson.

University president Dr. Roger E. Guiles also presented a governor's service award, meritorious service certificate and board of regent's award to retiring faculty member Warner Geiger, a member of the faculty for 32 years.

He also honored Mrs. Geiger for her work in the university's alumni association over the past several years.

Gasoline Taken From Car in Parking Lot

Orrin Damsheuser, 825 E. Woodland Ave., Appleton, told Appleton police Saturday that about 20 gallons of gasoline was taken from his car's tank sometime between 3 p.m. and 11 p.m. Friday.

Damsheuser said the theft occurred while the car was parked in the Allis - Chalmers parking lot on N. Island Street. The left headlight rim also was missing, he said.

Small Firms Puzzled by State Orders

Firms Get Orders

Brookside and Coenen were ordered to "submit plans" and Pleasant View and Hietpas were told to "submit engineering plans" by Oct. 1, all "for construction of adequate treatment facilities in accordance with the state water quality standards."

The orders charged that "untreated wastes are discharged to Kankapot Creek" by Brookside; "that factory wastes are discharged to a septic tank which has an overflow to a Mud Creek tributary" from the Coenen plant; that "approximately 1,000 gallons per day of untreated washing wastes are discharged to a tributary of Mud Creek" by Hietpas, and in the Pleasant View case, "untreated wastes are discharged to a tributary of Apple Creek."

Allan Schoen, an engineer in the Green Bay division office, said if each plant operator would contact the office, it would be possible to "point him in the direction" of solving his problem. Holmer pointed out however that the agency can't give engineering advice, since private engineering firms then would accuse the division of "practicing socialized engineering." Instead, Holmer said he believed the first step in nearly every instance would be for the producer to hire an engineer.

Schoen said a conference would be useful to spell out further what the state expects. He also said that in the case of minor problems, the agency might steer a manufacturer in the direction of a plumber, for example rather than an engineer.

State Approval

Some qualified specialist must prepare the plans that are required under the state orders, however, Schoen pointed out, and the state must approve first the plans and ultimately the remedy.

Of the four small producers, only Norm Coenen, operator of the packing plant on Outagamie County Trunk M, seemed unconcerned. He said he believed a seepage bed he had installed before the orders came down would satisfy requirements. All four said they were unsure where the state agency got the information cited in the orders, and Burt Hietpas, a partner in the family bottling plant, openly disputed their accuracy.

Hietpas said that while the outlet from a drain tile, in a field across the road from the plant, might sometimes carry a 1,000 gallon flow in a day, the only contribution of washing wastes from his plant would amount to 35 to 70 gallons a day. The rest, he said, was clean water overflowing from stock watering tanks in a barn, and from his cooler system. The drain tile, he added, starts some distance west of the plant and also carries runoff from a field and from property near the Appleton "city barn."

Like the others, Hietpas said he didn't know what the state wanted him to do, but he said if the orders mean spending thousands of dollars for a treatment plant, "I'll close the doors."

Schoen said solving problems of small manufacturers "usually are not that expensive." He remarked, "I don't think in any case we expect the impossible" from the producers.

In Calumet County

Carlos Froenning, operator of the Brookside Cheese Factory, said he thought he'd consult his attorney before doing anything. Froenning said his plant, at the corner of State 10 and County Trunk M in Calumet County, is five miles from the Fox River.

Like the others, he complained that the ravine he is accused of using to send pollution to the in friendly tones where she was from and why she was in Washington.

"I'm from Alabama," she answered. "They tore down my slum and I ain't got no place to go. I can't sleep on the bridges, I can't sleep at a gas station, and they won't let me sleep in a field, so I'm here. I stay here, too."

Here is a problem, I thought, that Washington has been wrestling with for years. What to do with the people left homeless when slums are torn down? And why can't the slum-lords be forced to bring their apartments up to building and sanitation codes?

I stood near a group of young Negroes, eavesdropping.

"Let's go eat," one woman said.

"Where?" a man asked. "Some place in government where we don't have to pay," replied a second woman. "The government ain't done nothing for me, so why should I pay them? I don't pay the government."

No Such Place

"There ain't no such place now," the first woman said.

Two friendly looking Negro women in their early thirties grinned at me. I stopped to chat.

"Where is everyone from?" I asked.

"All over," one said. "We come from all over. And we're going to stay here."

"Isn't it kinda cold at Resurrection City?" I asked.

"I'm from Chicago," answered the woman. "Snow comes up to your knees there. I don't mind the cold here."

"Anyone from Wisconsin here?" I wanted to know.

"Yeah, Milwaukee," she answered. "Father Groppi has been here but he's gone back to Milwaukee to get some more people."

"Look," I said, indicating with a turn of my head. "Who are those white hippie women?"

White Hippies

In obvious disgust she looked at two white women in their early twenties. Without a doubt, they were the dirtiest, shaggiest people I had ever seen. Their hair hung to their shoulders, bleached and matted. They wore the usual string of hippie beads. One of them was holding hands with a Negro man who frequently caressed her and kissed her passionately.

"They ain't with the campaign," my Negro informant guessed. "I think they are just dressed up that way. Nobody like that should be in the campaign. They were probably put there by the F.B.I. or the Fox is dry much of the year. "It's no crick."

There are no fish living in it," he said.

Similarly Art Simon, operator of Pleasant View Cheese Factory, a neighbor of Hietpas and Coenen said he'd like further proof from the state that he is a polluter of the Fox.

The state orders make it plain that the resource officials disagree. The agency's powers to demand a halt to pollution of "the waters of the state" are recited in each order.

Schoen said the size of the pollution problem and the scope of the steps needed to stop it usually are proportionate to the size of the plant.

Interest Is Clear

"There wouldn't have been an order if what he was doing was satisfactory," said Holmer of the individual manufacturer. The legislature's intent in recent anti-pollution laws make it "pretty clear" that it is the state's policy to want water quality improved, he added. It might be possible for a small operator to argue, "If it was just me, there wouldn't be a problem," the agency head observed.

But, it isn't just one operator, and the state isn't drawing the line by issuing its orders only to "big" operators police to find out what's going on."

So the poor people had doubts about the authorities approving their actions? Or was it just natural suspicion of the law? Or hatred of the white women?

I started eavesdropping again on a group of two Negro women and one Negro man.

Pushed Down

"Stokely didn't step down, he was pushed down," one woman was saying.

"No, he stepped down all by himself. No one told him to," contradicted the Negro man.

"You mean, he stepped down from being head of the Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee?" I asked. "Why?"

"To keep from going to jail," the Negro whispered.

They know something about Carmichael's alleged communist affiliations, I mused.

I went to another group, lounging on the steps, lazily sunning themselves.

One young woman had BU on her sweater. "Is that Boston University?" I asked.

Sociology Major

"No — Buffalo University," she answered. "I'm here as a major in sociology."

"I'm from Buffalo University, too," her woman companion said. "Majoring in psychology."

I turned to the bespectacled young man sitting next them.

"What about you?"

"Oh, he's got a Ph.D. degree," giggled one of the girls.

"From where?"

The young Negro grinned. "Pool Hall. I'm a Pool Hall Doctor."

We all laughed at that one, and the young Negro liked it. He looked pleased as I giggled at another gag, and then went into a comic routine which should land him on TV with an astronomical salary sometime.

But around us there was no laughter. Only the solemnity of the dedicated or the dull.

Fond du Lac Schools to Be Flexible

permanent walls, but rather movable dividers in the form of bookcases or portable walls to give each facet of the school's facilities more flexibility.

"Through the use of advanced teaching methods, including team teaching in ungraded classrooms, we hope to give each student the most an educational system can offer," Petersen explained.

Even before the two schools are started, the administration has them filled. "What we hope the new Roosevelt building will do is alleviate crowded conditions at Bragg, Waters, and Roberts schools," he said.

"At present we have 495 students that could conceivably be channeled to the Roosevelt facility. The best facet of this is that overcrowding at Bragg School will be relieved to the point where the stage can be used for a stage rather than kindergarten classes as it has been for several years," he added.

Flexible Facilities

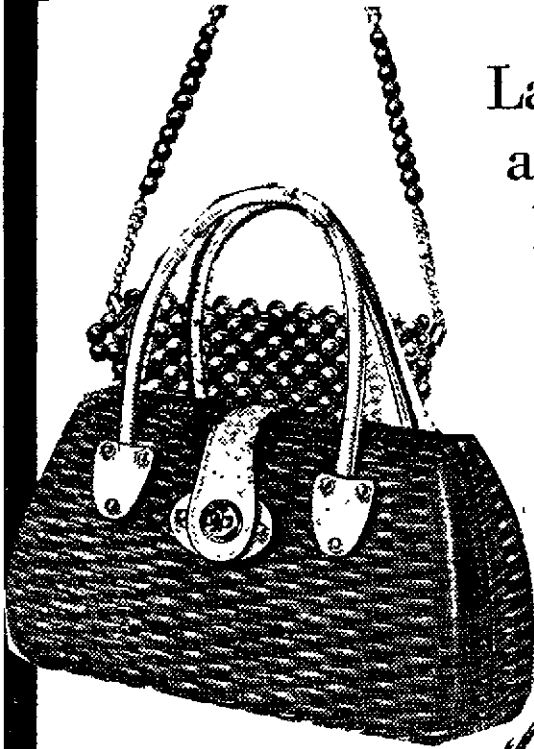

With the building of more flexible facilities the administration is hoping to put greater emphasis on group and individual work. "One of the things we hope to bring into our classes now," he said, "is a greater use of audio-visual aids that can either be operated by the instructor or students."

The real challenge of the new team teaching and ungraded concept, according to Petersen, will be teaching to an ability level, rather than an age level. Some of the schools in the system have switched to this method of teaching on a limited basis. Cleveland School started this year and a recent evaluation shows that it met with remarkable success.

First Flight Saturday Air Wisconsin Spreads Wings; Starts Service to Minneapolis

Air Wisconsin stretched its growing wings Saturday. The Appleton-based commuter airline, which less than three years ago started service only to Chicago using a single nine-passenger plane, logged its maiden flight to a sixth city — Minneapolis — in two of its four 15-passenger planes.

Fox Valley government, business, civic leaders and newsmen joined Air Wisconsin officials on the initial flight to the Twin Cities.

Twenty men left Outagamie County Airport Saturday morning in the airline's two new Beechcraft 99 planes. They stopped at Wausau — also recently added to Air Wisconsin's growing list of ports — for brief ribbon cutting ceremonies.

Wausau Guests

The flight from Appleton to Wausau took approximately 20 minutes, and from Wausau to Minneapolis, about 55 minutes. The needle-nose 99 cruises at about 260 miles per hour.

Ten Wausau guests boarded the planes for the remainder of the trip to Wold Chamberlain Field in Minneapolis where all were met by Twin Cities officials. An official welcome to the Appleton airline was extended by Wilfred N. Lind, chairman of the aviation committee of the Minneapolis Chamber of Commerce, who cited the service as being another valuable "link" between his city and those to the east.

Air Wisconsin officers, following a luncheon at the Minneapolis airport, outlined the birth and rapid growth of the airline founded by a handful of Fox Cities business leaders. The first flight was in August, 1965. Karl Baldwin, president, noted

New System Is Planned At St. John Little Chute School Will Start Specialized Instruction Next Year

LITTLE CHUTE — Upper elementary grades of St. John School will operate under a new system of departmental work during 1968-69.

Partial departmental instruction will continue in grades five and six. Teachers with special qualifications will give seventh and eighth grade children specialized instruction in respective subjects, according to Sister Euphrosine, principal.

To carry out this system, the same number of teachers will be required as have been needed in the past. Each one, however, will be an expert in his or her specific field including math, English, social studies and other subjects. The procedure will establish continuity and will assure thorough instruction for the student, the principal indicated.

Team teaching will be done on specified days in a few subjects. On these days, probably twice a week, all groups of a grade will assemble as a unit, engaged either as a listening group to a lecture or tape, or as a learning group through means of filmstrips and transparencies or similar media. A compact system such as this will also create time for a physical education program, Sister Euphrosine pointed out.

"All in all," she said, "this method will have a number of advantages, since the teacher will be enabled to spend more time concentrating on a particular subject, instead of preparing a number of diversified subjects. Though there will be six distinct group-teachings for each instructor, the follow-up will prove to be more concentrated."

Vandals Damage Auto and House

Two acts of vandalism were reported to authorities Saturday afternoon.

Allan Leitch, 1746½ N. Owaisa St., Appleton, told Appleton police that sometime after 9 p.m. Friday someone cracked his car windshield and also chipped the corner of it. He estimated it would cost $100 to replace it.

Charles McCarrell, Ashwaubenon, reported to Outagamie authorities that sometime since last Saturday someone entered his house in the Town of Oneida. He said there was evidence of a beer party, and holes were burned in blankets and the roof.

season has stretched considerably. No longer does traffic north Friday and south Sunday automatically pick up on Memorial Day, but slowly builds to a peak that weekend.

Normal traffic also has increased significantly in the past six years. In 1962 a traffic check of New London showed 10,113 cars crossing the Pearl Street Bridge and 4,273 the Shawano Street Bridge during a 24-hour weekday.

In 1966, a check of the N. Water and Shawano streets intersection showed 10,995 cars passing through the area from 6 a.m. to 10 p.m. (16 hours) on a Wednesday.

New London Police Chief Jack Algiers estimated that traffic from 4 p.m. Friday to 10 p.m. Sunday is about five or six times as great as a weekday.

Clintonville Police Chief James Beggs, a member of the force 23 years, singled out the two-year period — 1963-1965 — as the time traffic took its biggest increase.

Algiers noted that there wasn't any way under the present conditions where traffic could be properly handled. He said traffic lights had helped control some of the problem, the truck route alleviated some of the downtown disturbance, and more policemen were scheduled to work during suspected trouble hours to control traffic.

Waupaca Chief Fred Rasmussen has a different situation to cope with as U.S. 10 skirts the city and a large volume of traffic in the city results from tourists vacationing in the area and not just passing through.

Rasmussen said many persons were now traveling the scenic State 49 route which runs through the city — bringing back the traffic control problem. The city has no traffic signals which adds to the problem at two "bad corners" on States 54, 49 and 22.

Three Area Men File Bankruptcy Petitions

Bankruptcies have been filed in U.S. District Court in Milwaukee by three area residents.

Herbert L. Malitz, 18 E. Third St., Clintonville, listed liabilities of $36,959 and assets of $2,614 with an exemption of $2,380.

Albert W. Koeller, 714 N. Bateman St., Appleton, listed liabilities of $16,157 with no assets and $200 in exemptions.

James W. Osterhout, 1335 E. South River St., Appleton, reported liabilities of $5,366 and assets of $1,700 and exemptions of $1,200.

Valley are numerous. Among them are:

— The multi-million cannery which is scheduled to be built near Lemira by the California Growers and Cannery Association;

— The new paper machine addition at Combined Paper Mills, Inc., Combined Locks;

— The $1 million housing-for-the-elderly project in Kaukauna which recently was given the go-ahead because of the Department of Housing and Urban Development grant;

— The 10-story, $1.7 million elderly housing project and an $800,000 Post Office, both in Fond du Lac;

— A new municipal incinerator, several million dollars worth of building on the state university campus, plus several school and apartment projects, all in Oshkosh;

— The $500,000 new library, additions to Lakeview and Washington schools and the Riverside Clinic, all in Neenah and Menasha.

Also affected in Appleton will be the new Congregational Church, plus work at Appleton Memorial and St. Elizabeth hospitals. Several other major construction projects are scheduled to begin in the Fox Cities area within the near future.

No Talks Slated

No negotiation talks have been scheduled by the carpenters and the contractors this week, but mediators are expected to meet in the short future.

Merlin Van Dyke, Oshkosh, president of the contractors' organization, criticized the carpenters union for refusing the offer which he said was the same contract recently accepted by the masons.

"This is affecting the general public," he said, "because trying to push these wages way up will cause inflation."

The last time that carpenters struck the 22-county northeastern Wisconsin area was in 1957 and the walkout lasted three weeks.

A union spokesman said that of the 1,500 carpenters on strike, about 1,300 are regulars and the rest are transients.

And, a contractors spokesman added, despite the fact that the carpenters do not intend to set up picket lines, projects in all construction phases will probably be affected and that would mean laying off other craft union workers.

Aid Available for Part Time Student

Students who want to pursue college educations part-time may now apply for financial aid under a special University of Wisconsin program.

Applications for the program are currently being accepted at the UW Fox Valley Campus and all other UW campuses around the state.

Called the Elisabeth W. Connelley Awards, the scholarships will be made to part-time students who will take no more than six credit hours (half of a course load). Recipients may use the scholarship money for fees and books.

Awards will be made on the basis of educational goal, financial need and probability of success. Deadline for applications is July 1, and former Wisconsin Avenue after crossing the bridge and struck the pedestrian, who was crossing the avenue. The mishap was reported at 12:20 p.m.

Burglar Escapes With $320 From Menasha Tavern

MENASHA — Police are investigating a break-in and theft of a reported $320 in cash from Bret's Mistake Tavern, 7 Main St., sometime after 4 a.m. Saturday.

Officers were told a burglar pried open a rear door that was held shut with a 2 by 8 inch board. The cash was taken from the cash register and a hiding place in a waste container.

Tavernkeeper Kenneth R. Bretthausen told police he usually hid proceeds from the tavern business in the waste container and covered the money with bottles. He said he could not recall whether he put the bottles in the container when he closed up Saturday morning.

Neenah Woman Gets Leg Cuts, Bruises When Struck by Car

NEENAH — A 73-year-old Neenah woman apparently sustained only minor leg cuts and bruises after being struck by a car on E. Wisconsin Avenue Saturday afternoon at the foot of the Oak Street Bridge, authorities said.

Police said Josephine J. Meltz, 621 Chestnut St., was taken from the scene to Theda Clark Memorial Hospital in a fire department ambulance. Ambulance attendants said she rode in the front seat and was able to walk, and hospital authorities said she was not hospitalized.

Officers said a southbound car driven by John Nickasch, 50, 603 S. Park Ave., turned left onto Wisconsin Avenue after crossing the bridge and struck the pedestrian, who was crossing the avenue. The mishap was reported at 12:20 p.m.

Suamico Boy Drowns in Green Bay

Post-Crescent News Service GREEN BAY — A Suamico area boy drowned late Saturday afternoon when the boat in which he was riding swamped on the waters of Green Bay near the mouth of the Suamico River.

Two commercial fishermen, who had taken the boy with them as they checked their nets, were rescued after spending more than two hours in the water.

The boy was identified as Steven Zakowski, 7, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Zakowski of Suamico.

He had gone with his cousins, John Trafka, 36, and Traka's brother James, 42, to check gill nets placed in the bay.

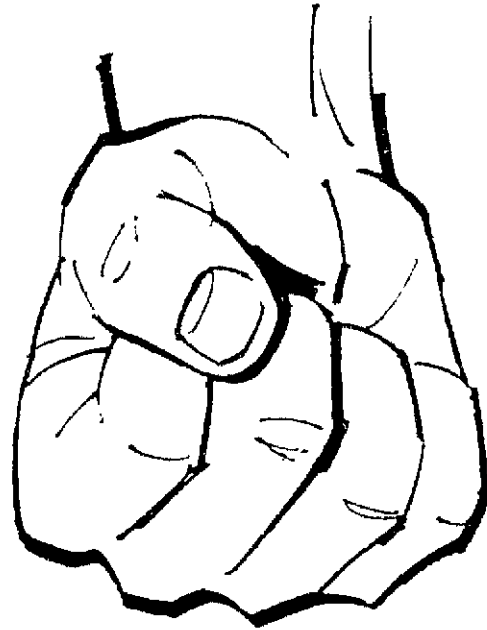

The trio left Suamico about 4 p.m. in a 16 foot boat owned by James Trafka. The boat capsized about 5:45 p.m. off Little Tail Point, about 15 miles north of Green Bay.

The two brothers took turns holding the youngster above water but they tired after two hours. All three were wearing life jackets.

Although the men were able to hold onto the boy all the time, he apparently drowned as a result of high waves that swept over them.

They were rescued after 6 p.m. by another fisherman sent out to look for them by Zakowski's father who became worried when his son failed to return home.

John Trafka later was hospitalized for treatment of shock.

Family Room...Bah, Humbug

BY CHUCK DILDAY
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

To me, one of the most interesting phenomena of this wonderful and weird world in which we live is the family room with which any newer house worth bragging about must be endowed.

Why is it that a home, which should be a sanctuary of peace and contentment, must have one special room dedicated to the proposition that here is a place where everyone can get in each other's hair?

Dilday

To me, after long and bitter years of trying to get away from it all, an isolation ward would be more practical and more merciful.

Deplorable State

It all seems to be a part of the cult of togetherness — a detestable and deplorable state where everyone in a family must share the others' experiences and activities to prove to the outside world that theirs is a family of sweetness and light and compatibility.

Children must join with parents in worrying about how to pay off the mortgage. Parents must join with children in paper doll cutting and first grade mathematics or the neighbors will start talking. At least, that is the way it seems to me.

When I was a boy the only time togetherness intruded on our family life was when it was time to wash the dishes.

We have some very close friends, an outwardly normal couple, who bought a new house last year. They asked my wife and me to go see it with them before they moved in, which we were glad to do.

We walked into the reception hall and I looked through a handsome archway and commented, "What an attractive living room."

Our hostess glanced at me with a startled look and said, "Oh, yes — it is, isn't it?" And then, with stars in her eyes and her voice trembling with rapture, she exclaimed, "Wait until you see the family room!"

No one paid any attention to the kitchen when we passed through, although our friends were a bit surprised when my wife commented on the attractive new stove. I don't think they knew they had one.

Then we came to an open door and the wife stepped in and waved to us to enter, saying, "Isn't it just simply wonderful!"

And we knew we were in the family room.

Outward Enthusiasm

"Look at that paneling," said the husband. "And isn't that rough brick at the fireplace out of this world?"

Before I could answer, his wife said, "Just look at this sliding glass door that opens onto the patio."

Then all was quiet while everyone just stood and breathed in the glory of it all.

Finally I asked a question that had been on my mind for several minutes. "Where's the bathroom?"

"The what?" asked my friend.

Look Around

"Never mind," I said. "I'll look around for it." I found it. In fact, I found two of them — one upstairs and one down, and I hurried back to share

Appleton Man Reports Car Windshield Broken

LITTLE CHUTE — Leonard Barth, 721 N. Morrison St., Appleton, reported to police that the windshield of his car was shattered by a beer bottle sometime Thursday night while the vehicle was in a parking lot by a local tavern.

He discovered the shattered window upon leaving the bar about 11:45 p.m. Thursday. He was unable to give police any motive for the vandalism.

I located our friends outside on the patio with my wife listening to a glowing description of outdoor living just outside the family room.

We finally departed and neither my wife nor I said anything for a while. Finally I asked, "Where are they going to sleep?"

"Why, in the bedrooms," of course, my wife replied.

"They have four of them. 'Wanna bet?" I asked and lapsed into what is known as one of my sullen moods.

Bailin to Leave Library Board

David M. Bailin, 29 Winona Court, has declined reappointment to the Appleton Library Board of Trustees after serving for 10 years.

He made his wishes known in a letter to Mayor George Buckley.

Bailin said he regrets to decline reappointment to the board but felt after a decade on the board it was good to have new faces which would generate new ideas.

However, Bailin informed the mayor he would be available in the future to serve on any other board or commission should he be considered.

Kimberly Police Remind of Emergency Service When Needed

KIMBERLY — Police Chief Donald Schmeck has issued a reminder to village residents to contact the police department for any emergency which might arise.

"The department is well equipped with oxygen and other types of rescue equipment which is available for use by citizens. Officers are trained in first aid and are able to contact more professional assistance within minutes should the need arise," the chief said.

He made the announcement after he learned that a citizen suffered a choking spell recently and no attempt was made to contact help from local authorities. "The police are here to serve the public and we are particularly anxious to be of help in case of emergency," Schmeck said.

$128 Million Scheduled for Valley

More than $128 million in federal monies was scheduled to be pumped back into the Fox Valley in fiscal 1967 through a broad range of government programs. This is indicated in an Office of Economic Opportunity summary released through its federal information exchange system. The sum represents another step in the steady increases in federal aid Wisconsin has been receiving since the early 1960s.

However, this trend could be slated to change if the federal government decides to tighten its belt. When one state's federal funds are cut, the federal budget, state officials fear.

Wisconsin may have seen symptoms of difficulties during the fiscal 1968 program when, one state source reported, some appropriations were slow in arriving because of a freeze.

Winnebago Tops

Winnebago County topped the four-county area in 1967 when it received $50.4 million in federal funds. Second was Waupaca with $39 million, Outagamie, $31 million, and Calumet, $7 million.

Over $45 million approved were for programs through the Department of Health, Education & Welfare. The bulk of this was in Social Security checks. Other funds included $19 million to Waupaca for foreign assistance food distribution programs. This program is tied in with the parity program but is not authorized by the same legislation.

The $19 million to Waupaca represents the amount of produce from the county sent to foreign countries under the foreign assistance food distribution programs. This program is tied in with the parity program but is not authorized by the same legislation.

The Commodity Credit Corporation administers price support and production stabilization programs, and some products produced in these programs are distributed abroad.

Over $6.5 million of the funds approved for the four counties were for economic development and public works projects. Winnebago again topped the four by receiving $3,340,432, or over half the amount allotted for the area.

Outagamie received $2,266,712; Calumet, $757,679, and Waupaca, $217,178.

About half of this $6.5 million was in the form of Farmers Home Administration (FHA) insured home mortgages, where FHA guarantees payment of the mortgage. This program is expected to grow with the recent passage of an interest rate increase from 6 to 8 1/2 per cent. Under the "points" (percentage) system, FHA and also Veterans Administration (VA) loans can compete with ever-increasing conventional interest rates.

In Winnebago, over $900,000 in funds were to supplement highway planning and construction while community action programs produced nearly $90,000. VA programs totaled $3.2 million.

In Calumet, over $600,000 was approved for Department of Agriculture programs, including $242,000 for foreign assistance program and commodity credit corporation.

Realtors 'Keeping Their Cool'

Through all the harangue on civil rights and fair housing here, members of the Appleton Board of Realtors have kept their cool. It is in contrast to their counterparts in other areas of the state where the sensitive subjects have been broached. But one of these days the realtors will have their say, according to Ron Williams, the group's fulltime executive director. After all, he pointed out, it is their industry or profession which is suddenly becoming the subject of regulation on the federal, state and local levels. "Our group is divided on just how it feels on the overall subject," Williams commented in an interview, adding this could be expected. Williams expressed his opinion that the organization, which consists of about 35 local realtors, 41 associate and close to 20 affiliated members, is prepared to make a public statement on its position if pressed to do so. "My personal observation is that in Appleton it is unfortunate that tension is building up over a problem which doesn't exist," Williams said. He indicated the board met recently and discussed the situation and empowered John Lawe, its president, to make a statement "at the right time and right place". "About the only thing we can say right now," Williams continued, "is that we will respect all laws and work within their framework." Create More Tension While this all sounds very fine, it does not project the feelings of many realtors that they are about to find their profession in a state of "triple jeopardy". "The current dispute over an open housing law for Appleton is very unfortunate," commented another realtor. "It is not serving a useful purpose as some people would believe and will just create more tensions when members of minority groups do come to Appleton." Requesting to remain anonymous, he put the blame on the Human Rights Council, League of Women Voters, some members of the clergy and The Post-Crescent. Realtors contend they are about to be confronted with a possible local ordinance on fair housing before they even have a chance to interpret the federal law which goes into effect in 1970 nationwide.

Stronger State Law Recent newspaper accounts emanating from Milwaukee have been to the effect that the Wisconsin Realtors Association intends to put its lobbying muscle behind an all-out drive in an effort to get the state legislature to adopt a stronger, uniform housing law. But not all of the association's members are agreed on this approach. Otto Bytof, well known Appleton realtor and a vice president of the association, said the Milwaukee Board of Realtors appears to be building up steam in making an approach to the legislature. The new Milwaukee housing ordinance, passed earlier in the month, bars discrimination on the basis of race, color or creed in the sale, lease or rental of all housing with the exception of owner-occupied duplexes and single family houses where the owner sells or rents the house without the use of a licensed realty broker or salesman. Many real estate men have labeled such an exemption highly discriminatory against their business. Bytof says this may be a valid point but as far as he is concerned the issue goes much deeper.

June 2, 1968 Sunday Post-Crescent B 7 "Everyone has his or her own opinion and you can agree or disagree because this is a free country," Bytof remarked. At the same time he expressed concern that the real estate profession has become a target of state, federal and possible local legislation. "I think if the individual wants to effectively market his house, he is being disenfranchised," Bytof declared. "Emotional Legislation" He emphasized that the right and freedom of a person to contract as a homeowner appears to be at stake — thus describing the other side of the coin. Bytof said there is no real problem in Appleton when it comes to fair housing but says it does exist in metropolitan areas. He questioned whether written laws would make people feel any different on the subject. Bytof added that the process of education may be slow and gradual but felt it was the most effective in the long run. "Let's face it," Bytof declared, "It is always hard to come up with a policy that everyone will agree with." "But we're no different than anybody else," he continued, "If there are laws we will follow them."

State's Okay Will Bring Implementation Standards Expected for Man-Made Lakes

BY ARLEN BOARDMAN
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

A program to establish acceptable health and safety standards for Wisconsin's man-made lakes is being initiated by the Northeastern Wisconsin Regional Planning Commission and could be implemented soon after a meeting with state health officials June 10.

The plan calls for financing a testing program of man-made lakes to formulate data for establishing standards. It is hoped with these standards, an acceptable health and safety management program can be set up for each community's lake.

Seven communities with man-made lakes or plans for lakes endorsed the idea.

Response To Questionnaire

The response came in a questionnaire recently sent out by Boyd Kinzley, director of natural resources who is conducting preliminary efforts. Only one community responded negatively.

The Fox Valley Council of Governments (COG) has joined the effort, and like the regional planning commission, is willing to coordinate community testing programs. COG prepared land use plans for the Kimberly park addition, which includes a proposed man-made lake.

Kimberly and other community and county officials have asked state health officials for acceptable standards but to no avail. Health officials say they have no criteria on which to base these standards.

Kenneth O. Bjorklund, Associate Public Health Engineer, State Division of Health, has agreed to consider the proposal at the June 10 meeting in Madison. A COG representative and an official of McMahon Associates Inc., Menasha engineering firm, may join the meeting.

McMahon is designing the proposed Kimberly swimming lake.

Planning Projects
Other communities responding favorably to the questionnaire were Black Creek, Oconto, Winneconne, Shiocton and Seymour. Officials of Winnebago and Outagamie counties, both planning lake projects, also backed the idea.

Kinzley suggested in the questionnaire that a workshop on testing procedures and equipment should be held to get the project off on the right foot. Response to this also was positive.

Three communities with man-made lakes indicated they already were conducting testing programs but would cooperate in a regional effort. They are Seymour, Black Creek and Oconto.

Man-made lakes were pioneered in the Fox Valley area. Black Creek's community lake was the first in the state and Seymour's the third. The Oconto project reportedly is the first filtered and chlorinated swimming pond with an artificial barrier separator in the United States.

Cooperative Effort
A cooperative effort to establish standards first was suggested at a meeting March 23 at Kimberly between Bjorklund and proponents of the man-made swimming lakes.

Gordon Bubolz, chairman of the regional planning commission, urged conferences between the commission's community services division and the State Division of Health to set up health standards.

Arno Haering, COG regional planning director, sought the meeting after Bjorklund strongly advised Kimberly officials to not undertake the lake project until others in the area proved to be safe.

At the meeting, proponents pointed to successes of Black Creek and Seymour lakes. However, Bjorklund would take no definite position.

Kinzley suggested in his questionnaire that "it would appear that a major factor in the state's decision regarding the feasibility of community swimming lakes is the maintenance of good water quality."

He continued, "If a sound testing program can show that a safe water quality can be maintained in a community swimming lake, the communities may make a major step forward in winning state acceptance of the lakes."

Federal Aid
Many communities have received approval for federal aid to buy park land and intend to seek additional aid to develop lakes. There apparently are no federal restrictions concerning purity standards.

Communities are looking to man-made lakes as an economical way to provide recreational area in place of smaller and more expensive swimming pools.

Winneconne's plans call for the largest, a 10-acre pond, but most projects are for three or four-acre lakes. Greenville, Omro and Freedom have lake projects still in early stages.

The state health division indicated in March it intended to speed up scrutiny of the man-made swimming lakes during the summer months. One official suggested a more effective testing program was needed.

Black Creek Girl Wins $35 Award

BLACK CREEK — Second place in the 16th annual conservation essay contest sponsored by the Rex Chainbelt Company of Milwaukee was won by Debra Diermeier, an eighth grade student in the Black Creek School.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Diermeier of Center Valley, and won $35 in cash and a plaque. Her entry, an essay titled, "Everybody Needs Conservation", was chosen from over 3,000 entries submitted from the entire state.

The essay contest is open to any student in the state, and each year centers on a conservation theme. The conservation essay is a regular part of the English and Science program at the Black Creek School.

The 1968 show is sponsored by the Wisconsin Gladiolus Society, with the Fox River Valley Gladiolus Society as producer and host. Members of the Wisconsin Gladiolus Society serving as officials are as follows:

Employers Prefer Them Jobs Not Difficult for Returning Servicemen

Servicemen returning home from Vietnam or domestic bases usually face many adjustment problems — most of which hinge on finding a job. This is not true in the Fox Cities.

"In fact, employer sentiment for returning veterans is extremely high and the majority have no trouble obtaining work," said A. P. Engebretson, district manpower director, Appleton-Menasha office of the Wisconsin State Employment Service.

Today's veterans come in a steady flow rather than the rush that followed World Wars I and II and the employment service is eager to channel the servicemen into the national economy.

"Admittedly, we give the veterans seeking employment preference in finding a job but also it's our legal obligation," said Engebretson.

Return to Jobs
"And this isn't much of a problem," the director said. "Many veterans return to their old jobs as provided for in the federal re-employment rights."

Many employers will consider veterans with physical disabilities. However, Engebretson pointed out that his office handles "very few" cases involving handicapped veterans.

He indicated that servicemen learning a particular skill in the service will find that their employment opportunities increased.

"One thing to remember is that employers are anxious to grab these returning servicemen because they have served their obligation and are ready to settle down to permanent positions," Engebretson said.

Francis Heesakker, Outagamie County veterans service officer, offers assistance to veterans in processing claims or in making arrangements to obtain needed materials and tuition for schooling under the GI Bill.

"We encourage veterans who have not completed their high school education before enlistment or in the service to do so upon returning home," said Heesakker.

He noted that servicemen will not lose an eligibility privilege while completing their education.

New Marketing Orders Praised

Bargaining Muscle Improves Prices, Gilbert Rohde Says

BY PAT DUFFEY
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

GREENVILLE — The bargaining muscle created by commodity marketing orders has been a prime source of improved producer prices and deserve their continued support, a prominent state farm leader testified this week.

Gilbert Rohde, president of the Wisconsin Farmers Union, discussed several marketing proposals now being considered by producers during an inter-

Voting Underway On Federal Order

Voting on the federal milk order referendum is under way. Ballots have been mailed to co-ops, county agents and individual (non-co-op) producers. The return ballot deadline is midnight Friday.

Qualified dairy co-ops can bloc vote their members for or against the order. Non-member producers will be polled individually by mail. A two-thirds majority of those voting is required to make the order effective.

If approved the five orders including Northeastern Wisconsin will be terminated. Some 17,000 dairy farmers shipping grade A to handlers in the 3-state area are affected, about 78 per cent of them in Wisconsin.

view here last week. He addressed a group of central Wisconsin co-op managers and directors.

"The provisions incorporated in the new Chicago order works to the advantage of more farmers," he observed, but implementing these provisions requires a legal framework — a marketing order.

More Say

"Most people agree that farmers should have more say in pricing the commodities they produce, but they were not given the whole story in the past," he said.

"This will only be achieved with some measure of disciplined production. Unless we agree to limit production to a supply-demand situation it is futile to talk of bargaining," he said.

"The Mondale bill provides these needs, but support is lacking from the producers. The only meaningful bargaining activity has been in the act of 1937. This legislation is being effectively used in milk marketing orders," he said.

Chicago Order

He felt the revision implemented in the new Chicago regional milk marketing order recommendations works to the advantage of more farmers.

It takes a legislative act to provide the legal guidelines for such things, he explained.

Research by the Farmers Union in the past has shown voluntary contributions for promoting milk have not been effective particularly in view of the imitation milk threat.

"Unless we are willing to support our industry we cannot do the research and promotion that needs to be done," Rohde said he could not understand the inconsistent attitude of some producers who on one hand questioned the accounting of funds in the state milk order, but declined to account for the money they pay into their national office.

Bloc Vote

"Dairying is the state's biggest industry," he reminded.

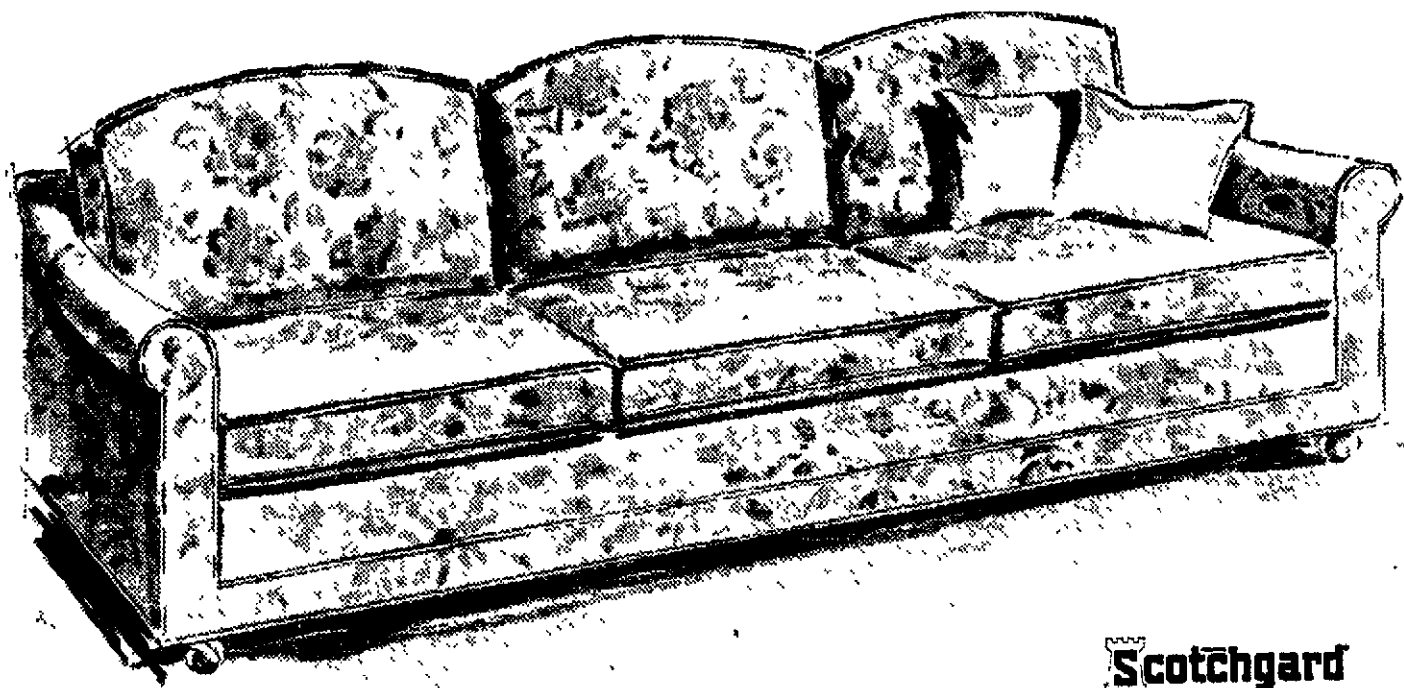

"The feeling against bloc voting by cooperatives on these marketing orders is unjust," he said. "If the co-op has done a good job of marketing and if the farmer is using it as his marketing tool then he should be willing to go along with the majority."

Rohde said he noted increasing acceptance of government supports particularly in view of the European subsidized farm imports which have been coming into this country. He defended the supports as being good for the farmer, his co-op and rural community.

He rebuked those co-op and farm officials who have "paid too much attention to the purely economic interests of the operation and the attitude that all other problems are for others to worry about."

He said the Poor People's March, poverty legislation and guaranteed income proposals were all "signposts along the road."

"We must be informed and aware of our responsibilities in the community. Instead of being dragged and pushed we must show concern and leadership in our local communities," he urged. He said past apathy was partly responsible for today's problems.

Data Corporation Mead Corporation Buys Research Firm

DAYTON, Ohio — The Mead Corporation, a $630 million per year paper, packaging and educational products company, recently purchased Data Corporation, a research and development company specializing in information technology, optics and special computer software systems. Gilbert Paper Co., Menasha, is a Mead division.

Mead's board of directors voted last week to exercise an option to purchase Data Corporation for 125,000 shares of Mead common stock. The directors met in Dayton, Ohio, the headquarters for both companies.

Howard E. Whitaker, Mead board chairman, said his company will operate Data Corporation as a wholly-owned subsidiary under the present management. William F. Gorog and Lysle D. Gahill are Data Corporation's chairman and president, respectively.

This is an exciting step for both companies," Whitaker said. "Data Corporation has many advanced developments to its credit. Their efforts will provide Mead with an intelligence antenna to future developments in several areas of rapidly developing technology."

Gorog said the merger will benefit both companies. "Our strength in information technology, optical systems and special purpose computer equipment ideally supplements the technology of printing, reproduction and educational systems under development at Mead," he said.

Miller Electric Installs Data Computer System

A Control Data computer system, bypassing the key punch cards step, recently was installed in offices of Miller Electric Manufacturing Co., Appleton.

This system which works directly with a paper tape, making the operation more flexible, is the first in the area and one of few in the country, Miller officials said.

Applications at Miller will include programming, payroll, inventory and production control, labor distribution, accounts payable, budget and expenses reporting, besides many other functions.

Business Notes

James L. Miller, 716 Ida St., Menasha, recently was appointed Wisconsin sales representative for Central Paper Co., Menasha. Miller, who recently concluded a year of sales training, also will handle the West Coast and immediate Midwest points.

Ervin G. Volkman, 1028 Surrey Court, Neenah, recently was named customer service supervisor for the Green Core line and Touchdown splitless pressure sensitive label stock of Central Paper Co., Menasha. He also will be responsible for sales training.

George F. Hutter Jr. recently was re-elected president of Plumbers Supply Co., Fond du Lac, at a board of directors meeting. Donald Smith was re-elected vice president and retiring general manager, Ben Bleuel, was elected secretary-treasurer. Bleuel will be replaced July 1 by Milton Taylor, formerly of Bloomington, Ill., also elected vice president. Taylor has 18 years in the wholesale plumbing business.

Mrs. Elsie Bridge, 1403 W. Summer St., Appleton, recently was honored with a service award for 25 years at the F. W. Woolworth Co., Appleton. She received a 25 year award and a gift at a surprise party held by her fellow employees.

Dale D. Mrotek, 1143 Maple St., Neenah, recently was named purchasing agent for Overly Inc., Neenah. Mrotek, 25, was an Overly estimator for seven years.

Three members of the Northern Wisconsin Chapter of Budget Executives Institute, including a Kaukauna man, recently attended the 18th international conference at Boston. They are Joseph A. Kirkland, Badger Northland Inc., Kaukauna, president; Stanton Olson, Two Rivers, vice president, and Wallace W. McCallum, Green Bay. Kirkland was on the president's panel.

Thomas H. Schmidt, a Neenah native, recently was promoted to public relations director of CUNA International Inc., a worldwide group of credit unions headquartered in Madison.

Ralph W. Creapo, 35, a native of Oshkosh, recently was named field service engineer with Overly Inc., Neenah. Creapo, who graduated from Oshkosh Technical Institute in 1959, formerly was with manufacturing firms, including Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co.

The Roger W. Peters Construction Co., Fond du Lac, recently was honored as the builder of the first "good water community" in Wisconsin. Peters is developing homes which will be equipped with their own water supply and equipment to remove impurities.

Two Appleton Men Invent Products for Home Use

Two Appleton men, including the founder of Fox River Tractor Company, recently were granted patents for inventions which can be used in the home. Erwin W. Saiberlich, who recently announced retirement from Fox Tractor, now a division of Koehring Company, Milwaukee, developed a self-mounting apparatus for shelves.

His invention allows shelving to be mounted without tools, brackets or visible screws, and which is rigid and capable of supporting heavy loads.

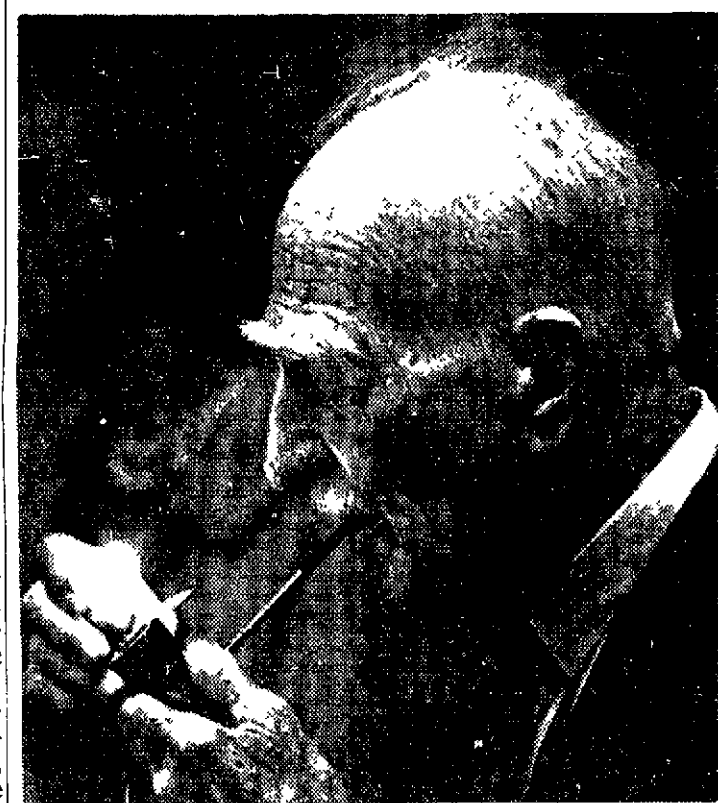

Marion A. McCurry recently developed a bassinet pad cover of cellulosic material which is longer and wider for easy removal and application.

It is so inexpensive it can be discarded after a single use. The patent was assigned to Kimberly-Clark Corporation.

Friden Will Display Equipment Models

New business machine models of Friden Inc., an electronics business equipment company based in San Leandro, Calif., will be displayed at the business machine exhibit Tuesday and Wednesday at the Left Guard Charcoal House in Appleton.

New models of the firm, which has offices at 604 N. Richmond St., Appleton, are the 1150 Printing Electronic Calculator, 5005 Billing Machine and the 5023 Data Processing Machine.

Lighting Up During a General Motors Corp. stockholders meeting recently is Charles Mott, 92, who helped guide the firm to its pinnacle as the world's largest manufacturing company. He once was largest stockholder and has given away over $130 million in his lifetime. The dean of GMC directors has served continuously since 1913. (AP Wirephoto)

U.S. Regains Trade Surplus Brightens Economic Picture

By JACK LEFLER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States regained its trade surplus in April, brightening the economic picture.

The Commerce Department reported this past week that exports rose 17.7 per cent to a record $2,888,500,000 last month while imports rose only 1.1 per cent to $2,640,500,000.

The export surplus of $248 million compared with a deficit of $153 million in March, which was the first time in five years there had been a monthly minus figure.

Part of the March decline was attributed to an East Coast dock strike that delayed movement of goods and a portion of the April rise was due to a catching up on shipments.

William H. Chartner, assistant secretary of commerce for economic affairs, predicted the trade surplus will improve over the balance of the year.

But he said there is only "a glimmer of hope" that President Johnson's goal of a $500 million improvement in the 1968 trade surplus over 1967 will be met.

President Johnson this past week sent Congress a message on international trade but didn't propose any new import surcharges or other measures to restrict imports.

He asked Congress to turn down import quota legislation being asked by various U.S. industries.

Johnson again urged passage of his proposal for a 10 per cent income tax surcharge, saying that it "is the most critical action we could take now to strengthen our position at home and in world markets."

The tax boost is intended to help stem inflation, thus holding back rapid U.S. price increases which would mean fewer exports and more imports.

George S. Moore, chairman of the First National City Bank, told a meeting of business men during the week that "we must use all of our enormous sales and marketing capabilities to raise the level of U.S. exports."

"We must get every exporter or potential exporter to examine the possibilities and problems of achieving a 10 per cent increase in exports in 1968."

"The fact is that we should have been selling a great deal more to the world than we have been. The money is there—foreigners have plenty of buying power. Otherwise, their dollars would not have been backing up into the hands of governments only to be exchanged for gold."

Sell Harder
"We need to be more aggressive salesmen in order to get foreigners to exchange these dollars, not for gold, but for machinery, equipment, general merchandise and clothing."

The cost of living climbed in April by 0.3 per cent to a record index level of 119.9 per cent of the 1957-59 average. The 4 per cent increase from a year earlier was the biggest year-to-year advance since the 4.2 per cent rise in the 12 months ended in January 1952.

The Labor Department said prices were boosted for nearly all major consumer items except meats, gasoline and new cars.

Arthur M. Okun, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, said in an analysis of the Bureau of Labor Statistics' report on price and wage developments in the 1968 first quarter:

Cool Demand
"The need for prompt fiscal restraint to cool off demand is the clear lesson conveyed by the hard facts."

"Until the tax increase is enacted, there will be growing strains on prices, costs, imports and financial markets at home and abroad."

Edith Stern Graduates From College at Age 15

By JOHN BARBOUR

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — Edith Stern graduates from college this summer, seven years early, a prodigy whose mind takes her to the nether regions of mathematics, who can't remember ever being unable to read.

But for genius, time is an irony. Edith grew up hiding her youth from her classmates and friends, found herself in adolescence when all about her were losing theirs, closed the door of her room to the intolerance of older ideas. Now, just 15 years old, she lives a private, sometimes lonely compromise between the world her mind demands, and the world her age decrees.

In the academic world, Edith finished grammar school in four years, skipped high school altogether. She begins a teaching fellowship this fall at Michigan State University, hopes for her doctorate before she is 12. Even now she practices the dialogue of teaching algebra to students. College, where, he says, he earned his degree in 13 months. Irony is not lost on Edith who he created in his home a total has a friend just starting as a teaching environment; reading, high school instructor. "She's mathematics, classical music, teaching my age group this discussion and debate, chess, year," Edith says softly. "Next whatever he could glean from season I'll be teaching hers." The world's literature and ex-

Edith's other world, escapes time. Edith's days, from the time and fact, visits fancy. It is time she cast aside her dolls, a three-foot stack of comic books featuring Spiderman and kindred heroes, a Friday night date with the televised interplanetary odyssey of "Star Trek," a Saturday morning excursion with the televised adventures of Spiderman again, and a cartoon satire called "George of the Jungle."

In between these two poles, Edith Stern, genius and teenager, coexists with the forces of her life, learning and growing up faster than other people have to, or can.

"It shakes them up sometimes when I go into a store and buy a comic book," she says with a rare smile, "and then turn around and buy a pack of cigarettes."

Pass for 21

"I can pass for my own age, or for 21," she says, and so she does. She faces the skin and weight problems of adolescence, but learns to use eye makeup from her roommates. She wears her dark, brown hair long, despite her father's insistence that it isn't neat. She looks, by her measure, like a person of "indeterminate age," and so she is.

It seems it's always been that way. Because of her innate brilliance, Edith has always been out of step with the slower-paced world around her. Her mother, Bella, taught her the alphabet and how to recognize some short words before she was 2. She was reading mythology before she started school. Edith stepped into the standard educational system with kindergarten at 5, but it was always an unequal match. She was out of grammar school and into junior high school at 9, when all her cohorts were 12. She started junior college at 12, when everyone else was 18 or older.

Her age was an embarrassment, and so she kept it a secret, or tried to. In her first year at Dade County Junior College, Miami, she had to write an essay, explaining a poem in terms that could be understood by an 11 or 12 year old. Each student read his essay to the class, which then judged the level of understanding. When Edith read hers, the class cried out in protest. "Too advanced," too hard to understand, too hard to get it into a trying to write for 12-year-olds. The lion's owner, unidentified, kept her own age a secret, lifted by police, said his tame pet escaped a few hours earlier.

The teacher, who knew her age, classmates gave Edith a snobbish grin, and Edith kept saying to herself, "please don't tell. Please, don't tell."

She still remembers the first time she admitted her age. "I was in the sixth grade. Everyone was 12 years old. I had a friend who was very good in English. I told her my age was 9, but she wouldn't believe me. After keeping my age a secret for so long, I found myself trying to prove I really was 9. I finally had to get my birth certificate."

Credit for Dad

For all her ability, Edith's father, Aaron, a former inmate of a Nazi concentration camp, a Hebrew teacher and scholar, claims some of the credit for her progress. He and his wife suffered from cancer of the jawbone, he underwent surgery before she was 12. Even now she studies at New York's Brooklyn College, where, he says, he earned his degree in 13 months. Irony is not lost on Edith who he created in his home a total has a friend just starting as a teaching environment; reading, high school instructor. Meanwhile, the family—which also includes a son, David 8,—shuttled back and forth between New York, Indiana, Illinois and Florida with Stern teaching in various colleges. "I can't remember anyplace we went where we didn't go to the library," Edith recalls. "I was only allowed to take out as many books as I could carry."

But, with each book, the gulf between Edith and the public school system increased. Her own mental ability was far above those she studied with, and buttressed by her home training, she found herself in class with nothing to do. Skipping grades didn't really help.

Stern says that child psychologists warned him that the pressures he was applying would only hurt Edith. Reluctant school administrators, he says, tried to hold her back. She took tests in 1961 to measure her intelligence, registering scores of 154 and 201, but experts said probably no test could accurately gauge her mental ability.

Both her parents say that the disparity between Edith and her classmates gave Edith a snobbish grin, and Edith kept saying to herself, "please don't tell. Please, don't tell."

The leap from junior high to college brought Edith into her own intellectual environment at last. Despite greater age differences, she also found it easier to make friends. Said one classmate, "She scared me a little at first. She test you, but once you understand that, you get along fine."

Another classmate sent Edith a comic postcard which she likes and saves. It says, "Despite a tremendous amount of ability, experience, efficiency and foresight, deep down I'm no different than any other run-of-the-mill genius."

This summer, Edith graduates from Florida Atlantic University, a new senior college in the state system at Boca Raton. She rooms there in a two-bedroom way, takes courses he can't room, study-room suite with three other girls.

For Edith, mathematics has become the real challenge. "When I became a math major, I had to start working," she says. Mathematics is something you get involved with. When you do math, you're preparing yourself for something. I love to solve problems. I suppose it doesn't feel she has reached murder mystery. You've got to her limit yet, and doesn't know where that limit is.

To Edith, her future at Michigan State is in a sense a visit to straight, and miss a meal, last yet another galaxy. She looks in thought. She even works out forward to the independence, to problems on restaurant place getting a driver's license if she mats, stops on the way to class. If she can't, she will grudgingly notebook. In one course, the mental exercise is so stringent, Edith says, "I'm getting to the point where I scare myself." Still she like some people watching a doesn't feel she has reached murder mystery. You've got to her limit yet, and doesn't know where that limit is.

Spotlight Shines on Wisconsin Fashions

BY JACKIE KRUG
Post-Crescent Fashion Editor

It's difficult to be interested in fall and winter fashions in early June when we Wisconsinites are still waiting—not so patiently—the first real waves of summer. But spring and early summer is when fashion press and buyers must get down to the business of planning for the needs of the fall season.

In Wisconsin, fashion is not just an import; it's a home-grown product too. To display the wares of Wisconsin's fashion industry Heritage Milwaukee was conceived five years ago. This year's Heritage, held May 22 to 24 took 25 fashion editors from all over the nation to points around the state to view Wisconsin-made fashions.

Appleton-Based Firm

Zwicker Knitwear, with its home plant in Appleton, presented its fall and winter 1968 line May 23 at the Paine Art Center, Oshkosh.

Picture perfect Zwicker creations were displayed art museum style behind a lovely carved picture frame in the Center's lower gallery.

Noteworthy in the Zwicker showing was the extended use of vibrant colors guaranteed to harmonize with a fall-bright Wisconsin hillside or brighten a snow-dulled sky.

Texture Important

Next to color, texture is the most important factor in the Zwicker collection. Appearing often were the fishnet knits in berets, caps and ponytail hats. The original knit texture of the fishnets was sometimes outlined or underlined in contrasting black.

Most popular of the silhouettes was the beret—either tasseled or pom-poned. The visor cap was unique within the collection with its forehead-hugging visor that can be tucked under to create a beret.

Woman's Most Effective Defense In Case of Attack Is Loud Scream

BY ALICE HUCK
Post-Crescent Women's Editor

Editor's Note: When Paul Boesch talked to the state medical auxiliary on "The Womanly Art of Self Defense," his primary plea was that women be aware, and knowledgeable. His 1½ hour talk, full of practical knowledge, will be summarized in the Women's Section in three Sunday installments.

Woman's most effective defense in case of attack is scream. . . scream. . . scream.

"Let loose with the longest, loudest, most piercing scream you have in you. That one

The second most effective counter-attack should be aimed at the attacker's eyes. "Use your nails, your comb, your fingernail file, a pen, or any other item you can grab and dig and scratch as hard as you can. I would rather see a blind rapist than a dead woman," he insisted.

Mr. Boesch used several notorious examples where women, according to testimony of the killers, did not scream. Thirteen examples were the student nurses murdered in Chicago. The speaker said the Boston strangler had earlier in his career accosted a woman in Dallas, Texas, by grabbing her around the throat and saying, "If you scream, I'll kill you." But scream she did, and she lived.

He explained that if women don't scream, onlookers on the street, or people in an apartment house who hear a struggle, are not sure if the man is an attacker, or if the woman's husband is "playing rough." This might be the case even if a kicking, clawing, silent woman is dragged into a car, he said.

Outlines Precautions

However, during most of his talk, Mr. Boesch stressed measures that would help a woman prevent trouble.

Mr. Boesch said Americans are taught to believe that our homes are a sanctuary which even the police cannot enter without due process of law. "It's too bad this does not apply to those who want to invade your home without sanction of the courts and never think to apply for it," he added.

The speaker then asked each woman to think about her own home while he asked some pertinent questions.

First, about the doors. "Do they have locks? Do they work properly? Can they be opened by any means other than a key? Are there extra keys? Who has them? Have you lost your keys lately? If so, have you changed locks? Truthfully, do you EVER put the keys in the mail box or under the mat after all the warnings you have heard and read?"

Mr. Boesch warned the women that intruders know all the spots where people might hide keys, even though the "hider" might think she is being clever. He said keys should never be left within 12 feet of a door, and advised it was much cheaper in the long run, and safer, to give a school child a key of his own.

For women who live in apartments Mr. Boesch advised first initials only on the mail box or door plate, a properly installed chain lock that a hand cannot come through and release, or a good sliding bar.

From doors he went to windows — advising keeping those closed and locked that are not easily viewed from the street, or having screens that lock properly. He also suggested placing objects on the floor, under the windows, which fit into the decor but which might deter an intruder unfamiliar with the room.

The speaker also had some comments on the personal habits of women. He said, "There is no greater area of danger for a woman than her own bedroom if she is careless when she disrobes, because the sight of a woman shedding her clothes can provide varying degrees of provocative for men of different character."

Eliminate Temptation

"One man might pause, admire, perhaps whistle slowly and in spite of the thoughts aroused, go on his way. But another man might find the thought so penetrating, the temptation so overwhelming, that it could haunt him until it nags him into action."

"And that action could lead to heartbreak, even death." He added, "In simple words of practical self-defense: lady, pull down your shades."

Other self-defense measures included not being too friendly with salesmen or servicemen unless you know them thoroughly; never open a door after a knock unless callers identify themselves; leave a light when you go out at night; shine your car lights through the garage before you get out of your car.

Mr. Boesch warned, "If you come home and find the door open, phone the police, don't go in."

The speaker also brought the police into his discussion of women and cars.

Sensible Policemen

In answer to a question about a squad car stopping a woman alone on a highway, Mr. Boesch said, "No real policemen would object to following a woman, or several women, to the next lighted and occupied area." He suggested a woman driver in such a spot, indicate to the supposed squad car she has seen its signal, and then drive at a reasonable speed.

He advised women always to keep their cars locked, whether in or out of them, and at night to have keys handy rather than to stand at the car door fumbling in a purse for them. At stoplights he suggested stopping in the inside lane.

"If your car is approached; if someone attempts to open the door, don't hesitate to step on the gas. . . consistent of course with traffic safety. At the same time lean on the horn and blow . . . blow. . . blow. If your door is opened, don't hesitate to start suddenly, to literally knock the intruder away from your car. He hasn't tried to get into your car because he thinks it is a bus," Mr. Boesch pointed out.

The speaker had other warnings about "hawks" in a following car, hitchhikers (never. . . never), waving flashlights, and single blind dates.

The "blind date" could be the "death date" Mr. Boesch said and cautioned, statistics will paint a grim and bitter picture to bolster the truth of that statement.

He added that two girls are no safer going to a bar in hope of meeting an eligible man than one girl on her own. The hazards remain the same. But, he advised, "If you and a friend become entangled in a bar or at a party, with two men whom you did not know before the evening started, or did not know well. . . stick together. Don't be misled into going your separate ways, no matter what the excuse nor how reasonable or attractive it sounds. . . Two can yell louder than one."

"What does a girl do when her date turns sour? When he has had too much to drink? When his hands turn to paws and he thinks he can bear hug you into acquiescence?"

In this area, Mr. Boesch admitted women might think they know more than he. "But, as a man, I say that the woman who finds herself in this situation is far better off

All but Frills Are Free at Cuban Wedding Palace

By FENTON WHEELER

HAVANA (AP) — The doors of Havana's Wedding Palace open daily at 8 a.m. and before they shut nine hours later an average of 20 to 30 couples become man and wife in opulent, rococo surroundings without paying a single centavo.

Since the free Wedding Palace opened July 23, 1966, there have been more than 10,500 marriages. At times the newlyweds stream out every 10 minutes.

Palace is no misnomer for the elegant building on the Prado in Old Havana. Operated by the Ministry of Justice its stairways are solid marble. Gold leaf in the ceilings glows from the chandeliers and the massive rooms abound with ornate velvet furniture, mirrors and statues. Formerly the Spanish Casino, it used to be a playground for millionaires.

Best of All

It is undoubtedly the most plush of the marriage palaces which now function in four of the country's six provincial capitals. A new palace is expected to open in the eastern capital of Santiago July 26. Then only Matanzas will be without one.

Administrator Patricia Olano says weekends are the busiest, with an average of about 50 weddings a day.

Pay for Cadillac

No religious ceremonies are performed but the palace is open to anyone, including foreigners. Palace employees still talk about the marriage last year of an American and a Soviet.

The free part includes the ceremony and the use of the palace. Couples must pay for drinks, food, photographs, and if they want, a big black Cadillac to drive them away. There is no rice thrown, of course, because it is rationed.

At times, some couples seem overawed by the surroundings but the efficiency of palace employees cannot be faulted in moving the couples in and out with a minimum of confusion.

Prime Minister Fidel Castro took note of the Wedding Palace in a recent speech attacking false rumors.

He said some people were saying the palace was going to change its rules to make marriage more difficult there. Calling this ridiculous, he got laughter from his audience when he added:

"But of course, it may be that some opportunist took advantage of the rumor to hasten his marriage."

Neenah Teen Hopes to Outspell Washington Competition

BY SALLY NELSON
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Horses and Good horsemanship are of special interest to Terri Bondow, route 1, Larsen, as well as learning to spell and keeping up an "A" average. Above, Terri prepares to ride one of her two horses, and at right, she's up and away for a bareback ride around her parent's farm west of Neenah. (Post - Crescent Photos by Robert Vander Walker)

NEENAH — Spelling the word, "resiliency," won the State of Wisconsin Badger Spelling Bee May 11 for Terri Bondow, 13, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Bondow, route 1, Larsen. Terri is a seventh grader at Conant Junior High School.

Now her friends and teachers are hoping Terri's natural resiliency in living will stick with her this week during the national contest in Washington, D.C.

Terri left Saturday for Washington, where she will see as much of the nation's capitol as time will permit. With her are her mother; her teacher, Gene Markwardt, and Mrs. Markwardt.

Despite the pressures encountered in the fierce competition that has involved about 75,000 Wisconsin school children in the spelling contest, Terri has been able to pull through the tough spots and spring back into the natural, normal life of a teenager with a buoyancy and cheerfulness her friends, family and teachers say they find refreshing.

Unusual Poise
Displaying unusual poise for a person so young, Terri talked frankly, but shyly about her accomplishments as a champion speller and straight "A" student.

Asked if she possesses a "photographic" memory, Terri said she supposed she does — in part. To memorize, or learn, words, however, she uses a combination of remembering by "mind photo," relating subjects and phonetics.

Terri explained that she remembers the word "parallel" as having two "l's" because she studied it in winter when she was looking at the snow and thinking of skiing.

"The two l's remind me of skis," she said.

Although studying for spelling bees and everyday assignments take up a portion of her time, she is as likely to be listening to records, practicing her alto saxophone, exercising her horse or "sewing something."

Scouts And 4-H
For many years Terri has been a Girl Scout and is now a member of Conant Troop 347. She also has been active in the Beaver Valley 4-H Club and recently played in "Watch Out for Wally," the play the club presented in Winnebago County 4-H Drama competition.

It was through 4-H activities, said Terri, that she became more interested than many girls in homemaking arts.

Terri's interest in spelling has been "sort of always there," she said, but she credits her fifth grade teacher at Tullar School, Robert Schroeder, with encouraging her to compete on a state-wide basis. In 1966 Terri placed 30th after incorrectly spelling the word "pessimism."

A 'Wordsmith'
It was during her earlier years, too, that Terri found she liked being a "wordsmith" as well as just a speller. Terri, who also studies French, said she sometimes finds similarities in French and English words and examines words to find their full meanings as well as their spellings.

Terri said she hopes she will be able to take part in forensics in high school and looks forward to a career in which she will be able to use her knowledge of words.

"I feel kind of 'numb' about the actual contest," she said. "I hope I will win. I know a lot of my friends are hoping too that I will."

Terri has been given several booklets, or "study guides," containing over 3,000 words each, but she has no idea what words she will be requested to spell.

If Terri should win, chances are, based on her reaction to being Wisconsin's Number One spelling champion of the year, Terri would receive the honor gracefully and "bounce back" to her own, wholesome, self-rewarding life among her friends and family here at home, as "resilient" as ever.

There's Beauty Everywhere, and so much to learn, observes Terri Bondow, rural Neenah, the Badger state's top speller. The family dog also finds some interest in the tulips. Below, left, Terri shows she really can cook. Her interest in homemaking has been piqued by 4-H and Girl Scout activities.

Men in Two Camps Over Tie Versus Turtle Issue

JEAN SPRAIN WILSON
NEW YORK (AP) — A year ago an army of turtle-necked insurrectionists rose up in civil disobedience to the tradition of the tie. Since then this has been a nation of men divided.

In one camp stands the Establishment uniformed in four-in-hand windsors and butterflies, defiantly resisting wives, men's magazines and TV personalities who would jam avant-garde designs down their tie-bedecked throats.

In the other camp are the neckbanded rebels, the sartorial iconoclasts who daily do battle with maitre d's, personnel managers, and fashion-unmalleable men.

'Full Scale War'

This skirmish that started with the introduction of the turtle-neck has now escalated into a full-scale war encompassing useless Asiatic apparel called Nehru, guru, Mao, Dasha and Dr. Zhivago. Seed beads, iron crosses, sterling medallions and massive gold chain necklaces were more ammunition used against the tie clan by tieless men. And there have been beards. These were most feared by the tie side, concedes its spokesman, Myron Ackerman. With chin foliage who could spy a tie?

As the months have moved along not even legislation has been able to silence the dissenters or halt a steady flow of defectors, or so it seems. When Speaker Jesse Unruh wore a turtle-neck to a session of the California Assembly recently, the lower house voted that the tradition of necktie must be upheld—this in a state where men have long pioneered freedom of the neck as permitted by splashy sports shirts.

'Matter of Manners'

It's a matter of manners, say the defenders of the traditional harness. If a hostess specifies black tie, a man should not dress in his gym shirt, they argue, ignoring Amy Vanderbilt's wholehearted endorsement of the turtle-neck.

It's a conflict between generations, claim the neck band clan. Turtle-necks and their Oriental relatives separate the men from older men. Shirt styles with high throats thrusting up excess flesh betray the jowliness of middle-age.

Masculinity is involved in the minds of men who have long viewed the necktie as a sex symbol. Some tend to regard men who adopt traditional menswear as sissies. But the men who ignore the de rigueur of the tie claim that only the sexually insecure need flaunt such symbols. They quote Ogden Nash:

"The turtle lives 'twixt plated decks which practically conceal its sex. I think it clever of the turtle in such a fix to be so fertile."

Two Sides Win

This is an odd war because both sides seem to be winning. In major cities men's boutiques burgeoning with colorful, collarless stock are mushrooming in an effort to keep up with the ever increasing demand from the tie defectors and the quinslings.

At the same time the tie industry has never been healthier. Last year men increased their supply of cravats by 22 per cent, and the industry has the tieless shirt wearers to thank.

The turtle-neck trend blew the lid off color and style. Men who still won't go for the turtle-necks are not afraid of color or pattern anymore. "Now different hues and collar widths take more tues than ever before," said Ackerman, president of the Men's Tie Foundation.

Throughout history neckwear has reflected the mood of the times, Ackerman says. Brilliant colors and flamboyant patterns suggest cheerful days ahead. Ties are considerably wider than in previous years, an indication of peace, maybe even among the neck-banded and the necktie.

Men Who Had Angles Now Have Angels

BY JEANNE DORNFELDT

Special to The Post-Crescent
FOX LAKE — They gambled their most precious possession, personal liberty, on an angle shot — and lost!

Now, turning to creative writing, this small group of prisoners at Wisconsin Correctional Institute (WCI), Fox Lake, is attempting to make the period of incarceration seem a little less frustrating, and a few have won literary prizes.

Two contestants in the annual Wisconsin Regional Writers Association (WRWA) competition now wear the symbol of a winner, the treasured Jade Ring. In 1965 one man, now released, received first prize in the articles division for his entry relating to prison life.

The next year, WCI was proud to have another winner, who was awarded first prize for his short story, "April and Sonny." After leaving the institution, this man went to work in New York as a staff member of a religious publication.

Talk to Men
Four years ago, Miss Dorothy Litersky and Mrs. Pat

Doheny, representatives of WRWA, came to the institution to talk to men who might be interested in creative writing. Some with a hesitantly, about 15 men came to the meeting.

This was something new. They harbored suspicions as to whether these visitors were "do-gooders" and wondered what they might be "up to." They were even reluctant to admit to each other that they were presuming to be writers.

Over a period of several months, other speakers talked to the men. These included Al P. Nelson, Delafield, writer and instructor with the University of Wisconsin Extension, Madison, and Arthur Brehm, Dodge County Farm Agent. Both men directed their talks to the writing of features for newspapers and magazines. Although some of the listeners asked questions, the speakers were doubtful as to how much of an impression they had made. There was still a degree of tension.

Organize Writers' Group
Then the Fox Lake Writers was organized, the institution joined WRWA. And Mrs. Jeanne Dornfeldt, librarian, was appointed advisor. Regular meetings were, and still are held, on the third Thursday of each month. During all this time Mrs. Pat Doheny has attended regularly. She is accompanied alternately by Mrs. Marie Keszeli, who has offered the advice of her literary agency to the men, or by Mrs. Margaret Nelson, editor of the WRWA quarterly newsletter. These women are members of the Ozaukee Writers Group.

The attitude of the men attending the meetings changed completely compared to the reticence sensed at earlier gatherings. Writers are encouraged to bring their manuscripts to the meetings.

Constructive criticism is offered.

"I came out here thinking I was going to teach, and find after each visit how much I've learned. There's so much talent here," said Mrs. Doheny recently.

Mrs. Doheny has given a great deal of her time arranging contests in poetry, articles, short stories and humor. Members of various chapters of WRWA have consented to judge these contests and have awarded suitable prizes for the best works submitted. All of this has presented not only a healthy outlet for the expression of individual thoughts, but also has given encouragement to potential writers.

The appearance at some meetings by various established authors has been another positive factor for the men at Fox Lake. Prof. Robert Gard, Madison, offered copies of some of his books in an article contest relating anecdotes or local history. Prof. Gard is a prominent member of both the Wisconsin Idea Theater and the UW Extension, Madison.

Present Chalk-Talk
Earl Sherwan, author-illustrator of animal stories for older children, presented a chalk talk relating the written work to the illustrations of his books. The men were much impressed by the seeming ease of Mr. Sherwan's technique.

At more recent meetings Tere Rios of Madison, whose book "The Fifteenth Pelican" is the basis for the TV series "The Flying Nun," has been most gracious with her time. She has encouraged the writing of further installments for the series.

After a suggestion offered by Tere Rios, the Fox Lake Writers changed the name of their group to "The Knights of the Square Table." The potential authors meet around a large square table.

Those men who evidence a sincere effort in creative writing are selected to attend the spring and fall conferences of WRWA. The privilege has provided lasting impressions for these men.

Go to Conferences
Lectures are informative and the informal conversations between sessions and during the banquet have taught the men that creative writing is not a thing of chance, that it takes time, hard work, writing, and re-writing. They learn that even the best writers may have more reject slips than they have accepted manuscripts, in return for hours and years of persistence.

Some writer-members leave the institution, but the club continues as other aspiring writers are encouraged to try their hand at this activity. Approximately 60 men have been members during the past four years.

Thus the "men with angles" have come to realize that there are many "angels" in the field of writing who are willing to extend a helping hand, offering constructive criticism and inspiration.

Intelligent? Yes; Eggheads? — No

BY JOY STILLEY

NEW YORK (AP) — Members of Mensa wear as an insignia a small map pin with a yellow head but it doesn't stand for egghead. They are anything but that, despite the fact that intellectually they are in the top 2 per cent of the population.

The men, women and children in his international organization of brainy beings come in all ages, sizes, shapes, professions and personalities and their only common denominator is an uncommonly high IQ.

A typical social gathering, one of more than a dozen held each month, by the New York City group, attracts not only doctors, lawyers, merchants and industry chiefs, but a welfare department case-worker, an author who speaks five languages, a 17-year-old college freshman, a promoter for a book publisher, a karate expert, a housewife, a secretary in a monument company and an accountant, among others.

Discussion Topics
At such meetings thermodynamics is not as likely to be discussed as is Lobster Thermidor and the theory of relativity doesn't get as much attention as the relative lengths of the new fashions.

"It's like any kind of gathering," says Herb Ahrend, a sales promotion and mail order consultant who is chairman of the North American Mensa Committee. "One group might be discussing philosophy, another psychology, a third politics and still another, sex. Believe me, it isn't all uplifting conversation — they are apt to use more four-letter words than four-syllable words."

Although the (M) in Mensa doesn't stand for Matrimony, the organization has thrown like-minded people together with more accuracy than a computerized dating system.

And many Ms and FeMs, as they call themselves, admit that they enrolled with marriage on their superior minds.

Selection Process
"I joined to find a wife," frankly declares Irwin Marks, rehabilitation counselor for handicapped children with the New York State Education Department and member of the local group. "As long as there are built-in selection processes wherever you go, why not pick one screened for intelligence?" He and a fellow member, a New Jersey schoolteacher, will be married June 29.

Another successful searcher is Ira Solomon, who returned to New York from graduate school and found all his old girl friends out of circulation, so he joined Mensa as a likely hunting ground. His wife is not a member, but was the roommate of a member who brought her to a meeting.

Five in Family
Lya Korda, a textile designer from Hungary, former charge nurse for mental patients, glider pilot and holder of a private pilot's license, is engaged to a Mensa-physical chemist Phil Rosenblatt, whose two daughters by a former marriage are also members. Miss Korda's sister is in the Hungarian chapter, so after the marriage there will be five Mensas in the family.

Multiple Mensa families, however, are not unusual. Perry Oliver of Savannah, Mo., and his four children are on the roster, as are many family trios and quartets.

Mini-Mensas
The oldest on the rolls is J. G. Stelzenmuller, 83, of Birmingham, Ala., and the youngest is Allyson Ferguson, 4, of San Antonio. Texas is a state that not only grows them big but apparently grows them smart too, for another mini-Mensa is Sharalynn Stone, 5, of Kingsville, Tex.

Professionals make up the largest proportion of the society and, according to Ahrend, the four most represented fields are computer, advertising and communications, teaching and science.

Would-be Mensas have several routes to membership. They can present proof of ratings on previously taken tests—a minimum of 148 on the Cattell, 133 on the Stanford-Binet, or 130 on the Wechsler Adult Intelligence scale—or results of any other recognized IQ test.

Write for Tests
A cumulative score of 1300 on the college boards mathematics and verbal tests is also acceptable. The national headquarters in New York, at 50 East 42 Street, provides a preliminary, self-administered test. It is scored and the applicant is informed if he qualifies for a second supervised test administered under the direction of a psychologist.

Mensa, the Latin word for table, was started in London in 1945 as a panel of super-intelligent people who might prove useful to decision makers, and Mensas are still called upon to participate in opinion polls, psychological surveys and research programs.

52 Countries
Since then it has expanded to 52 countries, with a world membership of 18,000. Of these, more than 12,000 are in the United States and Canada. In the North American membership the ratio of males to females is nearly 3 to 1 and the age group with the largest representation, comprising nearly a fourth, is 36 to 45. Of the total, 8.6 per cent are only elementary school graduates, while at the other end of the scale, 5.8 per cent have a doctor's degree.

Terry Wraparound
Fine Dad's Gift

Looking for a bright idea for Dad on Father's Day? Make him a "shower power" wraparound of wonderful terrycloth in his favorite color.

Just install gripper snaps or cord ties along one long edge of a bath towel, so it can be adjusted to fit snugly around his waist, then add a pocket made from a washcloth decorated with an applique or his monogram. This terry "sa-ron" can be added to any washer load of household linens.

Complementing the stunning hats were a number of color matching scarves. Long and wide, they are perfect for wearing slung over a sweater or under a fall jacket or coat. Particularly pretty was a bright tangerine beret and matching scarf in mohair.

The Zwicker line is fashioned and moderately priced, suggesting the practicality of a whole wardrobe of knit hats and scarves for this winter.

One of Wisconsin's primary industries — professional football — got into the act as fashion furs were presented for the visiting editors by the Great Lakes Mink Association (GLMA). The showings were held at the Kimberly-Clark Corporation Neenah marketing center in the heart of Wisconsin's paperland.

For football and fashion conscious women there were fur creations to be worn to the first Packer game of the season, to the chilly championship game and, of course, to the victory celebration.

Packer Wives Model

Modeling the furs were the women who ought to know best what to wear to a Packer game — the wives of Packer players Doug Hart, Jim Weatherwax, Bob Long, Henry Jordan and Jerry Kramer and wife of Packer coach Bob Schnelker. Commenting on the creations was Packer defensive end Lionel Aldridge.

Mr. Aldridge informed the out-of-state editors that one-third of all mink produced is grown in Wisconsin. The Wisconsin dark ranch minks have rightfully earned the title of the "world's most beautiful brunets."

Circular Working

Of greatest importance in fur design for 1968 is circular working of skins. According to GLMA, about 90 per cent of fur fashions this season will feature circular worked pelts.

The circular line presents a pleasing drape to the creations.

Drawing first applause from the fashion editors was a mink piece called a "scat." It is a charming mink scarf that can be worn on the shoulders of a wool dress or suit or, when one end is pulled through a loop, can be worn on the head as a hat.

Also impressive was a design by Don Marshall featuring three rings of mink worn on the shoulders and fastened in front with a tri-color butterfly bow in black, brown and white.

'Medallion' Detail

Interesting back detailing was shown in a 3/4 length coat with pelts worked along curving lines forming a medallion design in the back and shaped borders in the front.

For late winter Packer games, Mrs. Bob Schnelker modeled a full coat of circularly worked natural ranch mink held at the waist by a wide black vinyl belt.

The short cropped jackets shown by GLMA are perfect for a fall football game or as evening coverups. Unusual and beautiful button detailing was prominent. One short jacket drawing approval from editors closed with cuff link-like buttons.

Other firms involved in the Heritage Milwaukee showings were: Junior House, Hansen Gloves, Borg Fabrics, EMBA mink breeders, Florence Eise-man's children's clothing, Everitt Hats, Jack Winter, Rolfs leather accessories and John Boughton furs.

A showing of student designs at Mount Mary College, Milwaukee, also was included in the 2 1/2-day tour of fashionable Wisconsin. On hand for the student showing was New York fashion designer Ron Amey who has taught this year in the college's fashion design course.

Turtlenecks, Boots Top Trends

This year may be known, in footwear circles, as "The Days of the Boots" with all the new styles, and variations of old ones, on the market. . . Turtlenecks of all types are as big as ever. One variation — now being seen in lightweight knit shirts and in dickeys — is the very high (8-inch) cuff. Its popularity will be limited in the hot weather, but it will probably be in big demand in sweater weather next fall and winter. . .

There are some fashion prognosticators who are not very optimistic about the long-range success of the Tunic trend for men — but almost all agree that it will be a big hit for young men.

BY CAROL HANSON

Post-Crescent Home Furnishings Editor

One of the most important ingredients in furniture making is the finish. Not only is it important to the manufacturers, but a homemaker planning her home around a particular period of furniture is interested, too.

Smooth or distressed (a process that can range from the wear resistant look to the heavy kind that gives a new piece a convincingly aged look,) stained, lacquered or enameled, the finish can change the look and character of a piece of furniture.

Enameled or Stained Occasionally, we find a really lovely piece of old furniture buried beneath ugly layers of enamel — this is especially true of pieces found in attics, barns and garages. When stripped of its unseemly outer coat and done in a natural or stained wood finish, the piece may well end up making an important contribution to the character of a room. Of course, the reverse is true, too. A piece of stained furniture may not blend well with the rest of the furnishings in a room. Painting it in a muted shade of a strong color might turn it into just the appropriate piece to add flavor to a lovely room.

In the past few years, we've seen a move to more painted furniture. Not only are furniture manufacturers coming up with such interesting colors as red, cranberry, blue, green, yellow, mushroom white and traditional black, but paint manufacturers are offering kits containing the necessary ingredients for enameling and antiquing at home.

Create Focal Point
Whether yours is a family bent towards modern styling or one that prefers antiques, there is a wide range of choices for you. If you are looking for a simple way to add a focal point to a room, you might like to consider a new piece of painted furniture or maybe you would enjoy antiquing an old piece and having the fun and satisfaction of creating something really lovely from a well-worn piece.

An Interesting example, above, of how the character of a piece of furniture is emphasized by its finish is shown in this attractive armoire in a mushroom white striped with subtle olive green to bring out the full beauty of the carved decorations. It has a gentler, more feminine appearance than it has in the natural wood finish. At right, a dainty desk for milady is shown in brushed green and white. The Mediterranean styling is emphasized with antiqued brass hardware.

A Beautifully Scaled Chest, above, makes a perfect accent for a living room, hall or bedroom. It is available in a combination of greens, striped with gold or in a rich coffee brown. The mirror is decoratively carved and has a classically-inspired cornice. At left, a pleasantly informal looking dining group is done in a yellow painted finish. (When done in a natural cherry, the look becomes distinctively formal.) Cane back chairs and impressive china cabinet complete the dining room setting.

Pair Says Marriage Promises

HORTONVILLE — SS. Peter and Paul Catholic Church was the setting for the 1 p.m. Saturday wedding of Miss Carol Jean Clegg and Francis J. Schmelzel. The Rev. Leo Przybylski officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Harold J. Clegg, route 2, and the late Mr. Clegg. Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Schmelzel, route 1, Appleton, are parents of the bridegroom.

The bride was escorted to the altar by her godfather, John Seegers.

Mrs. Ronald W. Willenkamp attended her sister as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Misses Patricia Clegg, Janice Borsich, Virginia Schueler and Kathy Halloran. Miss Janice Clegg was a junior bridesmaid.

Acting as best man was Roger Mulroy. Groomsmen were Richard Schroeder, Dennis Clegg, Ronald Ulman and Ronald Willenkamp. Guests were seated by Lee Wunderlich and Daniel Madden. James Clegg was a junior attendant.

The couple greeted guests at a reception at the Silverdome Ballroom, Greenville. The newlyweds will honey-

Your Problems

Ann Recommends Compassion; Nervous Laughter Not Funny

BY ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Here's an unusual one for you: Uncle Ted has a new wife. This woman cannot say one complete sentence without laughing. For example:

Me: "Hello, Inez, how are you?"

Inez: "Hello." Giggle, giggle. "I'm just fine." Giggle, giggle.

Me: "I'm sorry to hear you lost your mother last week."

Inez: "Thank you for your sympathy." Giggle. "Yes, Mother had a great many wonderful friends." Giggle, giggle. "And she suffered so much toward the end. It was a blessing when the Lord took her." Giggle, giggle.

This senseless laughter is enough to drive a person crazy. She gives me a headache. Uncle Ted is a peach and we love to be around him, but his wife drives everyone up the wall because of her continuous laughing about nothing.

Will you please tell us what can be done about it? — Aching Ears

Dear Aching: Inez is one of those unfortunate people who laughs because she is self-conscious — not because she thinks something is funny. Nervous laughter is a long-time habit — one Inez will probably be saddled with for the rest of her life.

Be compassionate. It's no laughing matter.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My job puts me in contact with dozens of people every day. For the past several years I have had a lot of trouble with my teeth. Three months ago my dentist advised me to have all my teeth extracted, so I did.

The people I work with have told me my dentures are the most natural they have ever seen and they have improved my looks 100 per cent. Every day now, someone remarks on my beautiful teeth. This morning one man said, "I never noticed what a lovely smile you have. Your teeth are perfect!"

I feel like a fraud saying "Thank you" and letting it pass — especially when my co-workers hear the compliments and know the truth. Can you advise me? — All Smiles

Dear Smiles: Accept the compliments graciously and say "thank you." The teeth are yours whether you bought 'em or grew 'em. You don't owe anybody a certificate of origin.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Everyone has been faced with this annoyance at some time or another; yet, so far as I know, nobody has come up with a solution. I refer to people who call on the phone and start out with, "Well, so you finally decided to hang up? I've been trying to get your line for an hour."

I realize such people are extremely rude, but they always succeed in putting me on the defensive and before I know it I am apologizing and even telling them to whom I was speaking.

You would be doing me (and others, I'm sure) a great favor if you could come up with a few crisp sentences to put down the bores. — Black Cord Fever

Dear Fever: Sorry, I'm

This Ranch-Style House is designed to charm even those who favor contemporary styling. The traditional features are incorporated to produce a comfortable charm. The three-bedroom house uses simplicity of design to emphasize the roof lines harmoniously.

A Fireplace Adds traditional charm to the ranch-style house. Paneled walls and a box bay window emphasize the comfortable, conservative design of the house.

Design Z-43 has a sunken living room, dining room, kitchen-dinette combination, three bedrooms, 2½ baths, a family room, foyer and laundry room, with a habitable area of 2336 square feet. The overall dimensions are 74' by 66' 8", which include the two-car garage, driveway and front lawn. Entrance is via a large covered portico.

House of the Week

Ranch Blends Charm, Comfort

BY ANDY LANG

Traditional in appearance, with an air of warmth and comfort, this ranch would be an attractive addition to any community in any part of the country.

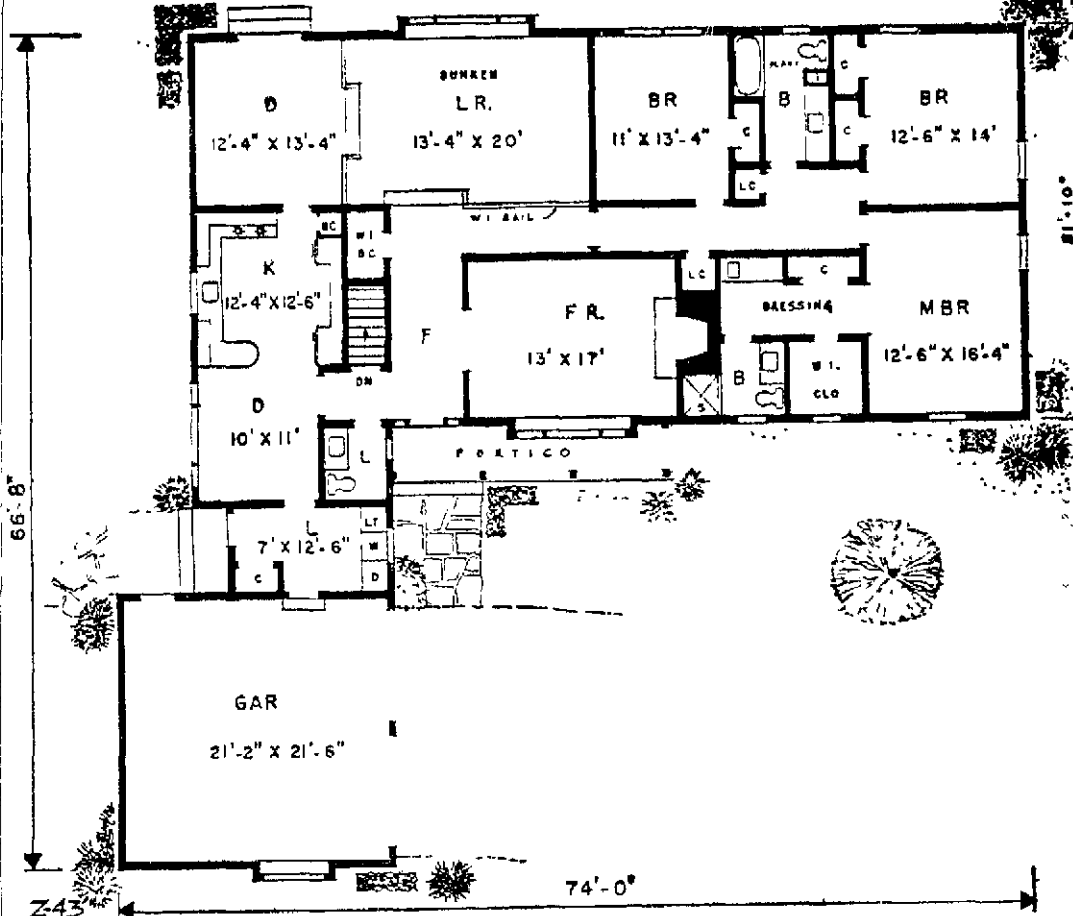

The exterior tastefully blends walls of hand-split shingles with a touch of brick veneer, both in harmony with a long ridge roof line divided to relieve the monotony of a straight profile. The louvered cupola, massive cement-topped chimney and diamond-paned box bay window in the garage all seem to fit naturally into the picture of a home that breathes hospitality.

Speaking of the garage, note that it juts out from the left side of the house, with the driveway running parallel to the main structure. This raises the overall dimensions to 4' by 66' 8", but a considerable part of the depth figure is due to the placement of the garage. Actually, much of the space is occupied by shrubbery and other landscaping.

Covered Portico

A covered, long portico leads to the centrally-located entranceway and foyer. The latter combines spaciousness with a convenient starting point for traffic flow. Directly to the rear of the foyer is a sunken living room, the two being separated by a wrought iron rail. Featured in the living room is a large picture window unit set in a box bay. To the left of the living room is the formal dining room, with a wrought iron rail again acting as a divider but without cutting the open view of more than 32'.

To the right of the foyer, architect William G. Chrgotis has placed a wood-paneled family room with a brick-faced fireplace that is visible almost immediately after entering the front door. While the family will like this room, it is Mom in particular who will love the kitchen layout. Over 23' long and equipped with the most modern appliances, it has a world of counter and storage space, plus a dinette area large enough for all day-to-day meals rather than for breakfast only. This means that the regular Spacious Open Views are displayed in the floor plan with only wrought iron rails dividing the living room and formal dining room. The kitchen is extra long to permit a considerable part of it to be utilized for an informal dining area.

The dining room need be used only has two doors, one leading to the outdoors and one to the enclosed stall shower. There is also a vanity with full-length mirror. The master bath is fully tiled, with a glass-enclosed shower. The plans call for a full bathroom between, will accommodate a recreation room and a workshop in addition to the necessary utilities. Age Question Delays Benefits

Social Security Head Asks Persons To Bring Proof

Failure to prove age is a major cause for delays in processing social security claims, Frank M. Donnick, Appleton social security office district manager, has said.

Bringing acceptable evidence of age when applying for benefits can speed up the first payment check, he said. The best evidence is a birth certificate made at or near the time of birth.

Donnick reported that although some people cannot obtain birth certificates, most Wisconsin counties have adequate birth records for the past 60 or 70 years. Other sources are a baptismal record made at an early age and a record of your age when the census was taken in 1900, 1910 or 1920, Donnick said.

The point is to find something, the older the better, that verifies age and bring it to the social security office, making sure it is a spare so it can be put in your permanent file, he said.

He said it is best to secure this document several years before retiring.

Beware of Springtime House Repair Racket

La Crosse Youth Victor In Hairy War

MADISON (AP)—A La Crosse high school student has won a major battle in his hairy war with the school system.

U.S. District Judge James E. Doyle ruled Friday that school officials may not bar William J. Gahan, 18, from attending graduation ceremonies Sunday at Central High School because his hair violates a school dress code.

His mother, Mrs. William J. Gahan, sought the court order against a similar ban for graduation.

School authorities raised a question of federal court jurisdiction which Judge Doyle took under consideration.

Judge Doyle ruled there was not enough evidence to prove that Gahan's appearance at the graduation would disrupt the ceremony. He also said the school was partly at fault because it waited until two days before baccalaureate services to tell the youth he could not attend without a haircut.

Gahan, who testified he had worn his hair long all through the school year without rebuke, said he washes and combs it daily.

Mrs. Gahan testified she did not like her son's hair style, but would not force him to cut it.

talking stranger offers to do a home repair job at a bargain price.

Operating Costs Systems Influenced By Variable Factors

Many variable factors influence the operating costs of a central air-conditioning system. For this reason, authorities recommend that anyone contemplating installation of a central cooling system call his local utility for an operating cost estimate based on the size of the equipment that will be involved, the local climate, and prevailing utility rates.

Use Average

It is possible, however, to use regional averages of operating costs as a guideline.

These averages are based on the hours per day and the days per year the equipment is likely to be used, utility rates, and cooling capacity.

For example, take a hypothetical three-bedroom, two-level home, well insulated and with 36,000 Btuh of cooling capacity: A utility in Texas (where the cooling season is long) estimated that the cost of operating this system for a season would be $118; a utility in Southern California (where the cooling season is somewhat shorter and humidity is considerably lower) estimated about $57; a utility in the mid-Atlantic region estimated $74.

Operating costs for a central cooling system, authorities point out, should be considered in relation to benefits, including comfort and health as well as reduced household work and expenses.

Have no part of him regardless of his plausible story. Usually it's, "he's between job contracts, and to keep his crew busy, he'll make you this low, low price. Better than their sitting around shooting dice on his time, etc."

Here's the gimmick. He'll make you think you really need a new roof, even though you didn't know it, with lots of technical-sounding jargon. Well, if you say OK, he'll put the roof on using the cheapest kind of stuff and working with utmost speed and carelessness. By the time (in a few weeks or maybe a month) your new roof springs leaks, your friend has long since left town with no forwarding address. Even the truck rental company may not be able to trace him. Your bargain will turn out to be one of the most expensive bits of roofing on record. It will have to be pulled off and replaced with a good roof, done by an honest roofer.

Only Small Sample

This details only a sample of how these gyp artists fast-talk literally millions of dollars from home owners every single year. No matter how many warnings are printed in newspapers and aired on radio and TV, there still are people who fall for these tactics.

Most of the time, they come around when Papa is out bread-winning, and Mama feels she doesn't know enough about such things to dispute the man's sales talk.

Like this one: Mama answers door, finds man posing as furnace inspector. If she believes him (difficult not to, most of the time) he's down in the basement pulling the heater to pieces. And boy, the cost of the spare parts and putting them in, none of which are needed, of course!

Painting Gyp

Painting is a real favorite racket. Almost anyone would like a nice fresh spring paintjob. So it's very tempting when a well spoken man says he'll do an A-1 job, using the very best quality paint. He may even let you see some gallon cans of DuPont or Muralo paint right in his truck. Of course, what's in the cans is anybody's guess.

Well, you can fill in the rest, how the paint gets slapped on, with little or no surface preparation, no cleaning, no sanding, no crack filling. And sure, it won't look too bad, for a while, that is. Then, after a few blazing hot days, some stretches of rain, the peeling will start. It won't stop until a good painter has to burn it all off and repaint with the kind of paint you should have had.

Only the National Fire Protection Association can guess how many millions are actually stolen by door-to-door fire alarm salesmen. Their scare tactics, practiced on the unwary and unknowing, result in grossly overcharging for grossly inadequate installations.

How to Safeguard?

Tell the man to wait while you call the Better Business Bureau or Chamber of Commerce. Or will he wait until you get an estimate from another contractor? Or will the fire alarm salesman wait until you maximum efficiency, and points verify with a call to the fire department? Just watch them evaporate!

So friends, if by some unhappy chance you get hooked by one of these characters, please don't say I didn't try to warn you!

Thermostat Location Is Factor In Cooling System Efficiency

The thermostat that is the brains of your central air-conditioning system is a small and sensitive piece of equipment. It has to be, in order to perform the big job of controlling your cooling system, says the Air-Conditioning and Refrigeration Institute.

ARI says your thermostat must be carefully located if your system is to operate at maximum efficiency, and points to these guidelines for proper placement:

—Don't place the thermostat near large glass areas where there may be excessive heat admitted.

—Avoid a location near equipment that radiates heat — kitchen appliances, radios, TV sets, large lamps.

—Don't tuck the thermostat out of sight behind a door; it needs to be positioned where air circulates freely. Today's designs have created inconspicuous, attractive thermostats. One home maker turned her thermostat to artistic advantage — as the focal point in an original piece of on-the-wall painting.

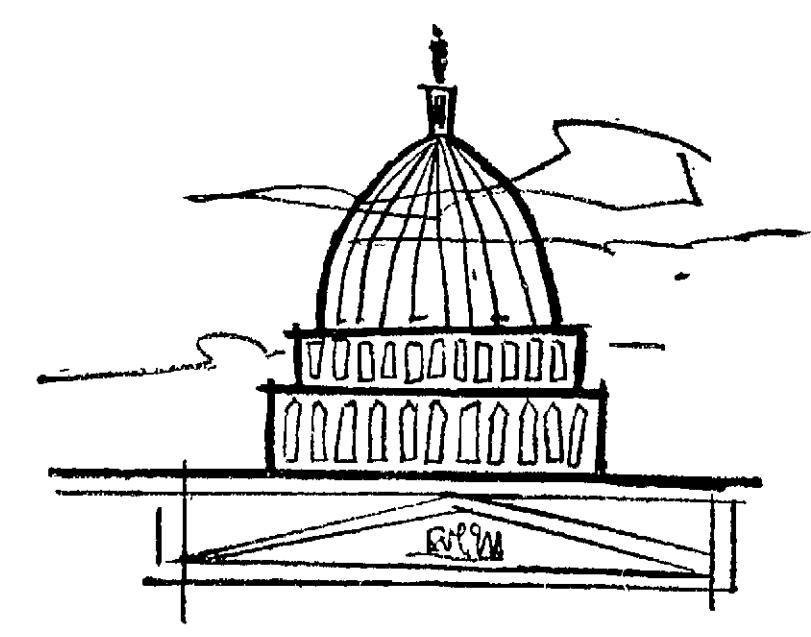

Once it's in place, set the thermostat at a comfortable level and leave it alone. An untouched thermostat results in steady temperature and humidity control that will provide the greatest comfort at the lowest cost.

Recently, John W. Wyngaard, manager of the Madison News Bureau for The Post-Crescent, was honored by his peers as Wisconsin's Newsman of the Year. The presentation, made by the Milwaukee chapter of Sigma Delta Chi, represented the first Ted Carpenter Memorial Award. Furthermore, since the award was the result of a selection made by the nationally-famous professional journalistic society from nominations submitted by newsmen throughout the state, it also represented one of the highest tributes a newsman may pay to another.

The award is but one of several bestowed upon John Wyngaard in recent years, and epitomizes, with them, the standard of excellence in news writing, reporting, and analyzing maintained by Post-Crescent personnel. This is the kind of excellence that makes price secondary to overall value . . . cost secondary to knowledge and understanding.

Commission Sets Its Last Meeting

Conservation Unit's History Will be Formally Concluded

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
MADISON — The 41-year-old history of the Wisconsin conservation commission will be formally concluded when it holds its last meeting in Green Bay on June 7, with a banquet to mark the occasion in the state's oldest city.

The commission on July 1 will go out of existence, as a result of the Kellett state government reorganization law which combined all conservation services of the state government into a single department of natural resources, under its own policy-making board.

At a banquet on the preceding evening, the commission will present mementoes of their service to Guido Rahr of Manitowoc, one of the senior members of the commission, and James Smaby of La Crosse, who was its chairman for the last two years.

On Resource Board
Four other members of the expiring commission will continue as state officers, having been chosen to serve on the seven-member natural resources board. They are Arthur MacArthur of Janesville, D. K. Tyler of Phillips, Charles F. Smith of Wausau, and Herbert Behnke of Shawano.

Guests at the banquet at the Beaumont Motor Inn will include about a dozen surviving former members of the commission, members of the executive council of the Wisconsin Conservation Congress, and probably representatives of the conservation clubs of the locality and the area, said John Beale, administrator of the state conservation division.

The Council will participate in the deliberations of the commission on June 7, when the principal item on the agenda will be the establishment of game harvesting rules for the fall seasons.

Fishing rules, in which the council is also involved, will be established later for the 1969 season, when the new board of natural resources will have sole jurisdiction.

Conservation Calendar
June 1 — Bass season opens, Michigan boundary waters.
June 2-5 — American Assoc. for Conservation Information, New Orleans, Louisiana.
June 2-7 — Wisconsin Tour for AAA Travel Counselors.
June 4-6 — Annual Convention for Midwest Fish, Game and Law Enforcement Officers Association, Omaha, Nebraska.
June 7 — Conservation Commission Meeting, Green Bay.
June 7 — Organizational meeting, Mississippi River Research Consortium, St. Mary's College, Winona, Minn.
June 8 — Bass season opens in inland waters north of Highway 64 (including Door County), St. Louis and St. Croix Rivers, downstream to the Highway 64 bridge at Houlton, Lake Superior, Lake Michigan and Green Bay (largemouth only).
June 8 — Annual meeting, Wisconsin Nature Conservancy, Wingspread, Racine.
June 9-11 — Conference of North Central States Boating Law Administrator's Assoc., Sylvan Lake, Custer State Park, South Dakota.
June 9-12 — 1968 Industrial Waste Conference, Niagara Falls, New York.
June 10-14 — AACC Annual Conference, New Orleans, Louisiana.
June 14 — Municipal Water Safety Patrol Training Session, Conservation Training Center, 9 a.m., Poynette.
June 14-16 — Spring meeting, Central States Chapter, Society of American Travel Writers, St. Louis, Missouri.

SINGLE SHOT

BY Jim Harp

It's a little more than difficult to write this column today.

Main reason is the fact that you're reading it on Sunday and your correspondent is writing it on Monday.

Now you are no doubt really confused, but the truth of the situation is that this was written last Monday, as odds and ends were cleaned up in preparation for a flight to the northern stretches of Ontario's wilderness on Tuesday morning.

As you read this, Post-Crescent photographer Ed Deschler and your writer are probably busy with preparations for the trip back home. Sometime this morning a float plane will take us from Cat Island Lodge on Trout Lake, northeast of Red Lake in Ontario. This will be the first leg of a flight that will return us to Appleton sometime this afternoon or this evening.

As one looks out the window of the office, it's difficult to concentrate on anything. The weather is dreary and overcast as it has been for what seems like an eternity. . . We wonder if the plane which is coming from Dayton, Ohio, will be able to fly under such conditions.

The answer will come tomorrow morning and if the weatherman cooperates we should be whisked from the Fox Cities to the northern part of Ontario by late in the afternoon.

Then it will have been four days of fishing for lake trout, northern and walleye on Trout Lake and other waters nearby.

In the next couple of weeks, this column and other articles will tell of what transpired along the way.

As of this moment, the anticipation is so great you can almost taste it. This has been a long-awaited trip since we were scheduled to make it a year ago. However, the weatherman threw another curve and the lake was still frozen over on the first of June and we never did get there.

Spring came early to the north country, just as it did here in Wisconsin. Whether or not Ontario has had as much rain as we have had in the last three weeks we do not know, but are anxious to find out.

It would be nice to be able to fill you in on the four days between leaving Appleton and arriving back, but have patience. God-willing, we will have some tales to relate starting next Sunday.

Passengers Not Included

Operator of Boat Cannot be Drinking

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
MADISON — While drinking aboard a boat is not advisable for anyone, only the operator of the vessel is actually prohibited by law from doing so, the recreational mariners of Wisconsin have been advised in an opinion of the attorney general.

Attorney General Bronson La Follette concluded that the penalties for drinking while operating a boat were modeled upon similar prohibitions against drinking by persons operating a motor vehicle. But the legislature did not write such a comprehensive law covering boats and their passengers. Passengers in an automobile are also prohibited from drinking under penalty of the law, he pointed out, but such a section was not incorporated into the statutes when the boat laws were written.

The opinion was solicited by John W. Slaby, district attorney of Price County in northwestern Wisconsin, where abundant waters annually are travelled by many of the 300,000 recreational vessels registered in the state.

LaFollette noted that the prohibition against drinking by the boat operator also prohibits operation of the boat while under the influence of a narcotic or dangerous drug.

But he said the drinking prohibition is binding upon operators of all boats, powered, row, boats and others.

CAMPING with VAN

I don't know who it was that first dreamed up the idea of nature trails with their descriptive markers and explanatory signs, but I really believe that all of us who enjoy the outdoors owe him a vote of thanks.

Even if we have more than a nodding acquaintance with the flora and fauna, it's a pleasure to walk these paths — and more often than not we can learn something new from the comments on the signposts.

Dear Van — On a recent outing I stumbled on a walking trail that had little signs at frequent intervals identifying the trees and shrubs. I found it fascinating, and wonder if I've been missing something all along. Are there many trails like this, and how do I find them? K.E.

Marked nature trails are fairly common and becoming even more popular. If you make a practice of inquiring about them at the various places you stop, you will be surprised at how many there are.

Ordinarily the signs identify only the plant life, but sometimes they go into animal life, too. One such trail that I hiked not long ago, circled a beaver pond. Signs pointed out the beaver house and described it, identified the dam and called attention to its construction, and even marked stumps cut by beaver.

Dear Van — Is there any safe way to dry shoes quickly. I accidentally stepped into a stream, and after I had dried my shoes in front of the campfire they were hard and shrunken. How can I salvage these shoes — and how should I dry them out next time to avoid this situation? S.F.

I have never heard of any safe way to dry leather fast; heat will usually cause just the result you have experienced.

Personally I prefer to dry the boots slowly: I wipe them dry as I can, put on a pair of dry, woolen socks, and just let them dry on my feet. Boot trees will also keep the leather from shrinking as it dries.

You might possibly salvage your shoes by re-soaking them and letting them dry slowly on boot trees. Once they are dry treat them liberally with either saddle soap or neatsfoot oil.

Dear Van — A magazine article suggested breaking off the lower limbs of trees for firewood. This strikes me as a practice which could lead to trouble with authorities. Am I right? If so, why should anybody recommend it? L.T.

You are absolutely right. The trees around campgrounds would be denuded quickly if many people followed this practice. Not only that, but growing limbs usually aren't much good for firewood anyhow.

In certain circumstances a person would be justified in breaking off dead limbs, but this should be reserved for emergencies, and the limbs should be removed carefully so the trees aren't injured. I'm surprised that anybody should suggest this procedure without explaining its limitations.

Dear Van — I've heard that it's not too difficult to make a lightweight tent known as a trail tent. Can you give me a description of this tent and tell me where I can get instructions? T. M.

This is the same thing as the tarp tent which I have mentioned before. It's simply a nine to 10-foot square of fabric. There are four tie tapes evenly spaced along each edge, one in the middle and one halfway between the middle and each corner.

The cloth should be pieced together with lap felled seams; and it is essential that a reinforcing patch be sewed on at the point where each tie tape is attached. For the person who has to travel light, this is a most versatile piece of equipment, since it can be pitched in a variety of ways to suit the situation. It can also be used as a tarp; and I have even rolled with Van, care of this newspaper, in one as an emergency shelter, enclosing a stamped addressed envelope for a personal bulletin showing a number of different ways in which such a tent can be used.

For an answer to your camping question write to Camping meet at the Grand American at Vandalia, and recently she won up in one as an emergency shelter, enclosing a stamped addressed envelope for a personal bulletin showing a number of

Beaver Has a Bad Habit, Returns to Scene of Crime

The beaver, although he has no homing instinct, is much like trapped and transported to new the proverbial criminal — he ponds and waterways, conduct- returns to the scene of his deed from 1951 through 1957 and crime.

Researchers from the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources recently described this bad habit in cautioning against releasing live-trapped beavers too close to the spot where they were caught.

Beaver crimes are really misdemeanors — flooded fields and miles from the release point, "new" lakes, clogged most moved less than 8 miles. culverts. Division of Conservation personnel move the offend- was 30 miles. Some travelled to new ponds and water- not at all, 24 were retaken at ways where damage is less the release point.

Average distance travelled by, and supervision.

272 beavers transplanted to lakes or potholes was 2 miles. Most wandered less than 4 miles. Longest distance covered was 20 miles. Ninety beaver were retaken at the release point.

Data showed that transplanted should be done no closer than 12 miles to the original capture site. Beavers transplanted on wildland potholes, trapped-out areas or lakes without outlets but with adequate food supplies, have the best chance of not becoming "two-time losers" with the Division of Conservation.

Live trapping and transfer of beaver is a function of the Division of Conservation and should not be done by private individuals unless under permit and supervision.

Porcupine Best Known for Ability To Gnaw Way Into Most Trouble

The chunky porcupine — a Hampshire and several New Hampshire counties offer bounties: derbely toothed rodent that waddles over other states have repealed similar laws as ineffective.

Despite bounties, porcupines thrive. The North American porcupine — Erethizon dorsatum, literally "the irritable back" — breeds from the table but, lives in forests coast to coast, if not closely watched, he may from Labrador to Tennessee eat the table, too.

Even the quills have value. Even the quills have value. Even the quills have value. Even the quills have value. Even the quills have value.

More to It Than Dropping in Lure, Revving Up Motor

What's the best speed for trolling?

The apparent simplicity of trolling generally dupes a lot of good anglers into thinking that this effective fishing technique is a matter of dunking a lure overboard and revving up the motor.

Like other methods, trolling demands a certain measure of know-how if results are to add up to expectations, say the fishing experts.

Of all the factors that influence the fish-appeal of a trolled lure, probably speed is the most significant, yet many fishermen overlook the basic step in determining exactly how much to throttle up the outboard or cut it back to an idle.

Function Properly
Since most artificial lures are designed with built-in action, they function properly only when wriggling along at a certain clip. When the pace is too fast or too slow, plugs exhibit a about as much excitement as a clump of water-logged willows. They work at the right speed — nothing more, nothing less. Among different lures, the speed varies considerably.

To pinpoint just how fast a certain model should be trolled, drop it overboard alongside the boat. Then watch and feel its action at various throttle settings. At one very precise point the plug responds like it should, darting and tumbling as the maker intended. This, obviously, is the right speed.

This simple yet revealing trick makes picking the correct speed an easy matter.

Forward Pass Upset

Stage Door Johnny Wins Belmont Race

By ED SCHUYLER JR. — Stage Door Johnny, who won his first race just 23 days ago, caught Forward Pass one-eighth of a mile from home and won the 100th running of the Belmont Stakes Saturday to smash the dreams of Calumet Farms for the first Triple Crown winner since 1948.

The lightly raced Prince John colt beat the Kentucky Derby and Preakness winner to the wire by a 1 1/4 lengths and was timed in 2:27 1/5 for the 1 1/2 miles.

Forward Pass finished 12 lengths ahead of third place Call Me Prince, who was another five lengths to the good of his entrainment. Draft Card.

Fourth Victory

It was the fourth Belmont victory for Greenleaf Stables, owned by John Hay Whitney and Mrs. Joan Payson, and it was the third Belmont triumph for trainer John Gaffney.

The upset kept Forward Pass from becoming the ninth Triple Crown winner in racing history.

Forward Pass, owned by Calumet Farms who also owned Citation, the last Triple Crown winner, won the Kentucky Derby by when Daner's Image was disqualified when a post-race test showed an illegal medication in his system.

Forward Pass needed no help in gaining the Preakness winners' circle and it looked as if he might win again Saturday until Stage Door Johnny ran him down.

The winner paid $10.80, $4.40 and $2.60 Forward Pass returned $3 and $2.10, and the Max Hirsch-trained entry of Call Me Prince and Draft Card was $2.20 for show.

Helodore Gustines rated Stage Door Johnny off the pace while Forward Pass and Mrs. Adele Rand's Call Me Prince ran one-two for a little more than 1 1/4 miles.

When Gustines asked Stage Door Johnny to make his run, the colt responded and left no doubt that the race was his once he passed Forward Pass.

Worth $117,000

The victory was worth $117,000 to the winner, who had earned just $16,885 in previous starts. The gross purse was $161,450, matching the high for this race.

Following Robert J. Kleburg's Draft Card across the finish were Gustavo Ring's Ardoise, C. V. Whitney's Champion, Tri Col or Stable's Sir Beau, Willard Waldheim's T.V. Commercial and Ann Forbes' Jade Amicol.

Missing from the field was Daner's Image, who was retrained from racing last Tuesday by his owner, Peter Fuller. The grey colt had caught the imagination of the sporting public through the misfortune of being disqualified from first in the Derby and from third in the Preakness.

White Sox Win, 1-0, On Two Scratch Hits, Bloop Single to Center

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago White Sox, held hitless by Dean Chance for 8 1/3 innings, defeated the Minnesota Twins 1-0 Saturday on singles by Bill Voss, Tom McCraw and Dick Kenworthy.

Chance, pitching on his 27th birthday, was making a serious bid for the second no-hitter of his career and the third in the majors this season.

He started the ninth by getting Luis Aparicio on a routine grounder. Then he threw a strike past Voss before the Chicago right fielder beat out a hit that went off Rich Rollins' glove at third.

McCraw then beat out another infield single, a high chop to Rollins.

Chance got Tommy Davis to force McGraw at second, but Kenworthy followed with a bloop single to center and Voss raced home with the only run of the game.

Chance, who pitched a no-hitter last Aug. 25, didn't get much offensive support from the Twins.

Cisco Carlos allowed just two hits through the first six innings, and Minnesota managed just two more against relievers Bob Locker and Wilbur Wood.

In the fourth inning Bob Allison walked with two out and raced to third as Ted Uhlaender singled. But Carlos ended the threat by getting Rollins to hit back to the mound.

Minnesota tried again in the eighth with one out Cesar Tovar singled and moved to second as Harmon Killebrew grounded out. Locker walked Tony Oliva intentionally and then retired Allison on a foul pop.

All on Walks
Before the ninth, Chance, now 4-6, allowed only three baserunners, all on walks. Only one of them, Buddy Bradford, got past first.

That was in the eighth when Bradford went to second on a sacrifice and to third on a ground out. But Wayne Causey grounded out, ending the inning.

Two no-hitters already have been pitched in the majors this season, both in the American League, and there have been a number of other threats.

Less than 24 hours before Chance made his bid, Larry

Baltimore Bays Run Win Streak to Six

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Baltimore Bays extended their North American Soccer League winning streak to six Saturday night before 4,080, beating the Night Beacons 1-0 on a goal by Asher Welsh with 57 seconds to play.

A walk, a single by Sal Bando and Jim Pagliaroni's sacrifice fly produced the first run and Danny Cater's single knocked in another. When Floyd Robinson followed with a single, Marty Pattin replaced Brunet and uncorked two straight wild pitches, allowing Cater to score.

Mike Hershberger then poked an RBI single, completing the scoring for the night.

MADISON (AP) — Racine Horlick captured the Class A title Saturday in a Wisconsin state high school track meet highlighted by a record-shattering 6-11 high jump by Pat Matzdorf of Sheboygan North.

Racine Horlick dethroned the defending champion Manitowoc in the 73rd annual meet. Ripon's replaced Plymouth as the Class B champion.

The lanky Matzdorf cleared 6-11 on his first try to shatter by four inches the record of 6-7 set by Tim Heikkila of Superior last year.

"I guess it just got me fired up," the 6-2 Matzdorf said when asked how he felt after missing a try at 6-8.

Matzdorf, a 160-pounder, recorded a previous personal high of 6-10 1/2 about three weeks ago prior to sectional competition.

Ships Finish Sixth

The defending Ships of Manitowoc finished in sixth place with 10 points.

First place Racine Horlick with 25 points was followed by cross town rival Racine Park with 18 points.

Nicolet was third with 14 and Wausau and Oak Creek tied for fourth with 12 apiece.

Tied for seventh with 8 points each were Kenosha Tremper, Wisconsin Rapids and Sheboygan South. Milwaukee Washington, Oshkosh and Racine Case tied for tenth with 7 points.

Ripon's newly crowned Tigers with 16 points were followed by Wisconsin Dells and Sturgeon Bay, who deadlocked for second in Class B with 14. They were followed by Clintonville with 13.

Racine Horlick's Brad Lee lands in the sand after leaping 21 feet, 11 1/4 inches to win the long jump title in Saturday's state high school Class A track meet at Monona Grove. His school won the team title. (AP Wirephoto)

Villanova's Dave Patrick crosses the finish line in 3:56.8 to set a new meet record in the 1000-yard race Saturday in Philadelphia. Manhattan's Brian Kivian was second. (AP Wirephoto)

Curt Fontenot just missed a color TV set, and Rick Jones just missed an early shower.

But Fontenot did get his eighth home run, a 3-run smash in the first, and Jones weathered a shaky start on the mound to help the Appleton Foxes defeat Clinton, 6-4, on a climate-perfect Saturday night at Goodland Field.

Fontenot's homer barely missed the protruding Crescent "O" atop the left-center field billboard. Any player landing a home run in the "O" is awarded a color TV set.

Jones (4-1) was tagged for a 3-run homer by Clinton's Ramirez in the first and allowed three hits and a run in the third, but then found the groove which sent the last nine Pilots down in order.

The victory, the Foxes' fourth in succession, marks their longest winning streak of the season on Jones' bunt which was nipped and carried them back to the handled Northey forced Sever-

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — A burly band of defenders has been named for the East to challenge West quarterback Gary Beban of UCLA in the Coaches All-America football game June 28.

Beban, Heisman Trophy winner, was picked for the West along with Wyoming's Paul Toscano, giving that squad a pair of capable running and passing quarterbacks.

They could have plenty of trouble, however, against the East defense headed up by end Kevin Hardy, the 280-pound Notre Dame giant, and rugged Claude Humphrey, Tennessee A&I tackle.

Secondary Has Hotshots

The East's defensive secondary also has some hotshots, including Tom Schoen of Notre Dame, Sammy Grezaffi of Louisiana State and Frank Loria of Virginia Tech.

D. D. Lewis, rugged Mississippi State linebacker, also is available along with Mississippi linebacker Jimmy Keyes.

The West should be able to throw up a strong defense, too, with Nebraska's Wayne Meyland, Oklahoma's Granville Liggins and Texas El Paso's Fred Carr among the standouts.

The game could produce another battle between Liggins and Tennessee center Bob Johnson, who put on a great duel in the Orange Bowl last winter.

Named to quarterback the East were Alabama southpaw Kenny Stabler and Massachusetts' Greg Landry, star of the North-South game at Miami last January. However, Stabler underwent a knee operation two weeks ago and it is extremely doubtful that he will be able to play. Officials of the All-America game say they hope to replace him with Dewey Warren of Tennessee if military duties do not conflict.

Fullback Larry Csonka, the

Syracuse blockbuster, will be available for ball-carrying duties, along with Phil Odle of Tulane for the East. Duhan of Tennessee and Bobby Wick of Arizona State. The West kicker will be Jerry DePoyster of Wyoming, with John Eason of Florida A&M assigned kicking duties for the East.

The West's running attack will be built around Beban and will coach the West, with John Toscano, elusive ball carriers at Pont of Indiana handling the Shots of Oklahoma.

The Friday night game will be the West's main passing target, along with Phil Odle of Tulane for the East. Duhan of Tennessee and Bobby Wick of Arizona State.

The West kicker will be Jerry DePoyster of Wyoming, with John Eason of Florida A&M assigned kicking duties for the East.

Dee Andros of Oregon State will coach the West, with John Toscano, elusive ball carriers at Pont of Indiana handling the Shots of Oklahoma.

The Friday night game will be nationally televised.

Former Buckeye Star, Nowell, Appointed to Official Ohio Post

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Former Ohio State University basketball star Mel Nowell was appointed deputy director of finance for Ohio today by Gov. James A. Rhodes.

Nowell, 28, played last season with the New Jersey Americans of the American Basketball Association. He was a three-time all-Big Ten selection and played on Ohio State's national championship team of 1960.

MENASHA — Withstanding a furious 2-out last inning rally by De Pere, Menasha High School earned its first trip to the state high school baseball tournament in 16 years by tipping the Redbirds, 4-3, in the sectional finals here Saturday.

The Bluejays, who qualified for the field of eight which begins in Eau Claire Thursday, built up a 4-1 lead after 6 1/2 innings, but saw their opponents score twice in the seventh after the first two hitters were strikeout victims. The tying run was resting at third when the final out was made.

Sharing honors for the Mid-Eastern Conference champions were pitchers Steve Seidl and outfielder Tom Buss. Seidl pitched a steady game, allowing six hits and three walks while striking out 11.

Buss drove in three of the victors four runs with two singles but almost became the goat when he lost a fly ball in the sun which perpetuated De Pere's 2-run outburst in the seventh.

Lead All Way
The Bluejays, who won the state championship under Coach Eric Kutzman in 1950 and last appeared in the classic when it was held here two years later, led all the way.

They broke a scoreless tie with a pair in the fourth on a walk to Chuck Gilbert, a hit batsman, a wild pitch and a 2-run single to right by Buss.

The Redbirds came back with one in the fifth on a hit by George Hillary, a sacrifice and a Texas-league single to center by Frank Gomez.

Brad Schliem tapped a hit in front of the plate to start a decisive 2-run sixth for the Bluejays. He stole second but was forced out at third on Gilbert's grounder.

Gilbert swiped second, and received another base when the second baseman interfered with him on the play. Tom Gillen received a walk and each runner advanced a base, Gilbert scoring on a balk by pitcher Bob Young. Before throwing another pitch, Young balked again. On a 3-2 count Buss drove his second hit to center scoring Gillen with what proved to be the conclusive marker.

Seidl collected his ninth and tenth strikeouts to initiate De Pere's seventh. His control deserted him momentarily and he walked Dan Danen and Paul Robertson.

Loses Fly Ball
Buss lost Gomez' fly ball in the right field sun, Danen scoring and Robertson gaining third. A wild pitch brought in the latter, sending Gomez to third. Ken Simons then became the game ending strikeout by waving at a third strike.

Hillary worked the first five innings for De Pere, Jim O'Keefe pitched the sixth and Young, who under WIAA rules had only one inning left because he had hurled six on Friday, finished up. The three limited the Jays to four hits, but all but one came in run-scoring innings. They fanned four, walked three and hit one batter.

For the second straight game, the Menashans played errorless ball. The losers also were flawless afield.

The result left Menasha with a 10-5 record while De Pere, which was state meet runnerup in 1960, finished with 11-5.

Lunn Ahead by 1 Luckless Aaron Falls From Lead in 'Atlanta'

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Stocky Bob Lunn survived a drive into the lake on the 18th hole and took the third round lead in the Atlanta Classic Golf tournament Saturday, shooting a 70 for a 54-hole total of 211 strokes.

The 23-year-old Californian, who won his first tournament title a week ago at the Memphis Open, moved out front when luckless Tommy Aaron — the second round leader — ran into early trouble and big Jack Nicklaus took a triple-bogey eight on the 18th.

Aaron bogeyed five holes on the front nine and finished with a 75 for a 214 total. Nicklaus was three strokes under par for the tournament going into the 17th, which he bogeyed, and then he ran into lake trouble on the 18th, finishing with a 217 total.

Lunn goes into Sunday's finish on Atlanta Country Club Course with a one-shot edge over Atlanta's Paul Bondeson, who fired a 68 on his home course for 212.

Deadlocked at 213 were Lou Graham, who turned the tournament's hottest round with a 66; former National Amateur champ Bob Murphy, who shot a 68; Australian Bruce Devlin, who had a 68, and 70-shooter Gary Player of South Africa.

Charles Cards 69. Arnold Palmer shot a 73 for 219. Defending champion Bob Charles turned in a 69 for an even par 216, and Doug Sanders had a 76 for 221, which left him back in the pack in the race for the $23,000 payoff to the champion.

Lunn had an erratic round, sinking birdie putts of 18, 30, 18, 10, 5 and 2 feet, but he missed three putts under three feet and collected his fourth bogey when he hit his tee shot into the lake on the 18th and took a six.

The former Public Links champion explained his two-week surge, which started at Memphis, by saying, "I am just in a groove that I hope I never get out of."

Uses Hot Putter
Bondeson, former paratrooper still looking for his first triumph, used a hot putter to move into second place. He rolled in birdie putts on the 10th, 11th and 12th holes and coasted in.

"I've never broken par for this place before," said Bondeson, who became affiliated with the club a month ago after dropping off the tour for two months.

Aaron, the hard luck veteran who has never won in nine years on the tour, rallied on the back nine to stay in contention despite his disastrous start.

The 31-year-old Georgian bogeyed the third, fifth, sixth, seventh and ninth holes. He tossed a club after flubbing a shot out of the sand on the seventh, where his ball rolled into a footprint.

Nicklaus, who rarely is hit by triple bogey scores, drove his tee shot into the bank of the lake on the 18th. He pitched out, then hit a third shot into the lake. He took a penalty stroke, hit his fifth shot on the green — and three-putted.

Booth, Kindler, Seegers and Joannes Win

The foursome of Larry Booth, Ron Kindler, Joe Seegers and pro "Mitch" Joannes captured the Reid Municipal Men's Club Event Saturday.

The foursome had a net score of 292. Kindler had the day's low net score as he carded an 89, less 21 handicap, for a 68. Joannes had a gross 74.

Finishing one stroke behind with 293 were Al Kranzusch, Amos McIntyre, Marv Green, and Rollie Fredericks.

In third with 299 were Don Anderson, Hal Robbins, Harv Lemke and Del Greunke.

Two foursomes tied for fourth with 303. They were W. C. Malmberg, Connie Schink, Fran Zimmer and Joe Dusseault and Red VandeLoo, R.J. Siebers, "Nibbs" De Young and Roger Brandt.

Foxes Slate 'Bat Day' For June 9

The Appleton Baseball Club is providing a new way for area youths to equip themselves for their favorite pastime. It's simply this — attend the Foxes-Quincy game Sunday, June 9.

Foxes Business Manager Ed Holtz reports that Appleton will be one of the few minor league clubs holding a "Bat Day" during the '68 season. This promotion has been one of the best received of all the major league attractions.

One thousand official Louisville baseball bats will be given away free. The bats are manufactured by the Hillerich & Bradbsy Bat Co. and are valued at $1.50 or more. One bat will be given away with the compliments of the Appleton Foxes to each father-son; father-daughter; mother-son; or mother-daughter combination admission.

Although passes, buttons, or any ticket will be honored for the game, only the combination paid admissions will receive a bat. Thus if an adult purchase a 75 cent ticket for himself and a 25 cent ticket for a son or daughter — one of these bats will be presented.

Gates open at 2:30 p.m. and game time will be 4 p.m.

Rosholt Nips Shawano for State Berth

SHAWANO — Rosholt gained its first state tournament berth in its history by nipping Shawano, 2-1, in 15 innings in the losers' sectional here Saturday.

Dave Richter drove in the winning run for Rosholt after an error put the leadoff man on base. Rosholt's first run came in the sixth and was the result of a dropped fly ball which would have been the third out.

Bill Drengler had two of Shawano's four hits and singled in its only run in the first.

Bill Gipp and Dave Jesse shared mound duties for the losers and fanned 18. Gipp struck out 14 in the 10 innings he worked.

Dave Richter and Tom Printz hurled for Rosholt and fanned 14.

Ralston, Roche Gain Net Finals

BALTIMORE (AP) — Dennis Ralston of Bakersfield, Calif., and rookie pro Tony Roche of Australia gained the finals of the Baltimore Tennis Classic Saturday night with straight set victories.

Ralston, second-year pro, ousted Cliff Drysdale of South Africa, 11-9, 11-9, and Roche whipped Roger Taylor of England, 6-3, 6-2.

Manier, John Cannon 3 Behind Jabas Takes 'Adler' Lead

NEENAH — Appleton's Don Jabas shot a 2-under-par 69 to take a 3-stroke lead in the championship division of the 1968 Adler Brau Tournament at Neenah Bridgwood Saturday.

The Butte des Morts ace carded nines of 33 and 36 with four birdies and two bogies.

In a second-place tie are Neenah's John Cannon and defending champion John Manier with 72s. Ridgeway's Herb Stimski and BDM's John Lindberg share third with 73.

Butte des Morts' Bill Martine shot a 72 (32-40) to take a single shot lead in the "A" Flight competition. Milwaukee's Bill Gulickson is in second with a 73.

Ted Stimski owns a 2-stroke lead in "B" Flight play with a 76. Art Smith is second with 78.

In "C" Flight action, Kel Vanden Brock holds a 1-stroke lead over Harry Edwards with an 84.

Jabas played a consistent round hitting all but three greens in regulation. Final round action will be played today.

Ermer Most Stunned Man In Twins' Dressing Room

CHICAGO (AP) — The most stunned man in the Minnesota Twins' dressing room wasn't Dean Chance, who missed a no-hitter in the ninth and lost the game, but Manager Cal Ermer.

"I just can't believe it," muttered Ermer after the Twins bower 1-0 to the Chicago White Sox Saturday. "I can't believe a fellow can pitch a game like that and then lose on three squibs."

Chance, a 20-game winner last year, also was a little shocked. He rushed to the shower, dressed and was the first player to leave. Saturday was his 27th birthday.

With one out, Bill Voss was credited with a scratch single off third baseman Rich Rollins.

Then Tom McCraw hit a high chop to Rollins and beat it out, Voss going to second.

Voss moved to third on an infield out and scored on Dick Kenworthy's blooper over second that ended the game.

"I didn't realize Voss had made a hit," said Chance. "I didn't even hear the crowd reaction. My main concern at that time was to get McCraw. After McCraw was safe, I noticed the scoreboard and saw that Voss had been given a hit. That was the first I knew about it."

While Ermer called the three hits off Chance squibs, Manager Eddie Stanky of the White Sox came up with a new name for them. He called them "chink-glove to break up Chance's no-

NOTES and NOTIONS

If Moscow, Russia, had come to the National League meeting in quest of a franchise with only a cow pasture to offer as a baseball field, its chances would have been better than Milwaukee's. Milwaukee, it has become crystal clear to any of us dreamers who thought the city had a fighting chance for a new NL club, will never be let back into the "fraternity" as long as the present owners hold the voting rights. Milwaukee's only faint hope of returning to major league baseball — and hope does spring eternal in the Wisconsin metropolis — is to be on the receiving end of a switching American League franchise. For example, Cleveland's club has been in financial trouble for years... and, of course, the dwindling White Sox attendance in Chicago could force Art Allyn to reconsider all of his denials about a move to Milwaukee.

The awarding of a potential Milwaukee franchise to Montreal, was the epitome of NL audacity — the crowning blow, as it were. Wisconsin fans wouldn't have turned handsprings if Buffalo or Dallas-Fort Worth had received the nod — but at least they are good solid United States communities with solid backgrounds in one of the great U.S. pastimes. What, then, are Montreal's credentials? Well, for one thing, the city left organized baseball high and dry when it withdrew from the International League eight years ago. What about a stadium? Well, Montreal will supposedly have a new one in three years, but until then its facilities are grossly inadequate by major league standards. What about climate? If the NL thinks it has trouble now with April and May postponements, wait until it gets a taste of Montreal in the next few years. Going international is no crime per se for the NL — but such a step should be taken only after the deserving major U.S. cities have been taken care of. About two decades ago, baseball men went into a frenzy because a few players "jumped" to the Mexican league. Max Lanier, Vern Stephens and others were branded outlaws and banned from U.S. ball for a time. Now, another North American nation — Canada — not only is legal baseball territory but is preferred as a franchise site over Milwaukee, which for a dozen years averaged 1½ million fans per season in a precedent-shattering devotion to baseball.

The feeling persists that Montreal was a compromise choice. Though logic dictated against including the Canadian city, it had no "enemies" of the type that Milwaukee, Buffalo and D-FW have. Judge Robert Cannon, one of the Milwaukee representatives at the NL meeting, feels that past NL animosities about the Braves affair have been forgotten — except in one or two cases. And, of course, when a unanimous vote is required — as is the case in NL expansion — the minute minority is enough to scuttle any community. Public opinion and the press in many parts of the country have been solidly behind Milwaukee but they've failed to convince the stubborn few that Milwaukee committed no sin in trying to prevent the Braves' flight to Atlanta with every legal weapon available. Whether the individuals in question are Bill Bartholmey and Bob Carpenter — or someone else — probably won't be revealed for a long time, if ever. And, of course, League president Warren Giles, in his public pronouncements, has never given anyone the slightest reason to consider him pro-Milwaukee.

Isn't it strange that one of the anti-Milwaukee reasons cited by Giles is that city's proximity to 2-club Chicago? Baseball, in the height of consistency, has now awarded franchises to five California teams. Three of them — LA, Anaheim and San Diego — are within 100 miles or so of one another. San Francisco and Oakland are next-door neighbors. That, by Giles' standards, is sound geographic distribution.

The NL's horse-and-buggy philosophy was betrayed again in its rejection of the 2-division idea. Not every team in the AL is completely happy under the newly-adopted set-up, but, as a whole, it's a progressive step which will heighten fans' interest. If nothing else, the NL could try the plan on a 1- or 2-year trial basis — then make a permanent decision.

Halas

Pro football won't ever be able to repay its debt to George Halas, who finally has accepted the well-intended advice with which he has been showered and has retired. Giants of the game like Halas, Curly Lambeau, Bert Bell and George Preston Marshall laid the foundation for pro football and made possible its evolution into today's top glamor sport. Green Bay, in particular, owes much to Halas. Though the Packers and the Bears were the bitterest of rivals on the field, their pioneering efforts in the NFL made them cohorts at the council tables. In days of the Packers' financial troubles, "Papa Bear" stoutly defended their right to stay in big league football and sought ways to help them — while others in the league might have thought that moving the franchise would be the easiest solution.

A pioneer like Halas knows what perspiration, dedication and tribulation it has taken to nurture a new sport into maturity. Many of today's owners have little or no appreciation of what a franchise really means. Their only qualification has been the possession of a sizable bank roll.

Fred

During my recent baby-sitting stint (I ministered to the needs of our four youngsters while my wife took up temporary residence in a maternity ward), I came to a new conclusion about athletic endurance. The real endurance champion is not the decathlon trackman or the golfer who plays 36 holes a day or the pitcher who works 15 innings. It's the housewife who is constantly in motion — blowing a nose, answering a doorbell, diapering a baby, band-aiding a scratch or finding a lost shoe or sock. Maybe a new Olympic event for the gals could be instituted.

Paustian No. 5 becomes the fourth "John" in the last five generations. I rather hope that John C. will someday be a better athlete than John L. He joins a highly mobile crew consisting of Greg, 6; Jeanne, 5; Russ, 3; and Fred, 1½. Jeanne kind of breaks up the "set" — like a basketball team, for example — but we're delighted that she happened along.

Little League, Babe Ruth Play Starts Monday

New Menasha Sports Complex Ready

MENASHA — Boys Sports Inc. will dedicate and start play on its new sports complex on Earl Street in the Town of Menasha Monday afternoon. Dedication activities, arranged by the women's auxiliary, will begin at 4:30 p.m. after which the North and South Little Leagues will play doubleheaders, and the Babe Ruth circuit launches its slate with a single game. The dedication will include flag raising, invocation and benediction, introduction of teams and first ball-throwing ceremonies by Boys Sports and city officials.

The National 1,000-Yard Club, which has been an active supporter of the program, is arranging to have a delegation of its award recipients present. Located on 10 acres of land just north of Menasha, purchased three years ago, the facility includes two Little League fields and a Babe Ruth size diamond, complete with backstops and dugouts, a clubhouse, containing locker facilities, concession stand, office and rest rooms and a large parking area. Most of the work has been done by volunteer help, including officers and directors, parents of boys in the present and past programs and persons who have no direct connection with the organization but were willing to lend a helping hand. The work has gone on almost daily this spring although set back frequently because of wet and inclement weather. Cutting, grading and mowing the diamonds, construction of the clubhouse, six dugouts, scoreboards and signs were done almost entirely by volunteer help. Fencing of the three diamonds is expected to be completed within the next several weeks.

The program sponsored by Boys Sports serves approximately 550 youth, parents and friends of boys' baseball here. Funds for the organization have been garnered through the annual picnic during the July 4 weekend, dances, candy sales, corn roasts, 1,000 Yard Club and fund drives.

A highlight of the summer's activities will be the playing of the 9-state national division Little League Tournament here Aug. 9-10. Boys Sports also will play host to the state Babe Ruth tournament July 25-28. Boys Sports was organized in 1960 with four Little League teams. The league was expanded to six in 1961 and a second Little League and a senior circuit, which later became the Babe Ruth League, came into being in 1963.

The Menasha South League played at Bayer Field, on property leased from Paul Bayer for $1 a year, from 1961 through last year while the North loop has held its games at Jefferson Park. The Babe Ruth wheel played at the city ball park and Sixth Street diamonds. Bob Noeller and Don Kuehl, who started as team managers, now are state Babe Ruth director and district Little League commissioner, respectively. Joe Van Lieshout is Boys Sports president; Larry Marquardt, vice president; Dave Olsen, treasurer; and Peter Heimerman, secretary. Other directors are Henry Gajewski, William Gierke, Howard Hanson, James Lettenberger, Bob McCann, Hilary Seidl, Norm Busch, Lee Forman, Erv Hemb, Kenneth Holmes, Andrew "Bud" DeLeeuw, Norm Flom, Dick Spielbauer, Roger Westphal and Jack Williams.

Two-Mile Mark Falls in Meet

George Young Tops Record in Beating Clarke

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — George Young upset Ron Clarke and smashed the American record for the two-mile run Saturday in the Champions Track and Field Meet. Young, clocked in 8:22.0, was only 2.2 seconds off Clarke's world record in running the second fastest two-mile. The Casa Grande, Ariz., school teacher outkicked Australia's Clarke. The old U.S. standard of 8:25.2 was set by Jim Ryun and Jim Grelle in 1966. Young took the lead from Clarke at the start of the last lap and maintained the pace. Clarke finished in 8:22.5. Earlier, hurdler Earl McCullough and sprinter Charlie Greene breezed to victories. McCullough, of the University of Southern California, won the 120-yard high hurdles in 13.6, well off the world's mark of 13.2. Greene streaked to a 9.3 triumph in the 100-yard dash, defeating arch-rival Jim Hines by about two feet. Greene, a Nebraska University graduate student, and Hines share the world record of 9.1 in the 100.

Ron Copeland of the Southern California Striders finished second behind McCullough. Copeland was one-tenth of a second ahead of Willie Davenport's 13.9. The eighth home run of the season with one out in the 10th inning gave the St. Louis Cardinals a 6-5 victory over the New York Mets Saturday. Shannon, who had doubled a run across as the Cards rallied for three and tied the game in the seventh, unloaded against reliever Cal Koonce, and his shot landed deep in the left field bleachers. The Mets had tied the score in the bottom of the eighth on Ed Charles' pinch homer. That made it 5-5 after the Cards had taken the lead in the top half on a single by Orlando Cepeda, a passed ball and Tim McCarver's single. It was the first run scored this season off Koonce, who had worked 20 2/3 scoreless innings until Saturday. McCarver walked, touching off a three-run Cards' rally that tied the game against Nolan Ryan, the Mets' starter, in the seventh. Shannon doubled one run across and singles by Julian Javier, Lou Brock and Curt Flood produced two more. Ryan singled two Met runs

New Clubs Participate

Baseball Draft This Week Expected to Tap 1,000 Prospects

By JACK HAND NEW YORK (AP) — Montreal, San Diego, Seattle and Kansas City, baseball's newest expansion clubs, will participate in a limited phase of the free agent draft of college and schoolboy talent Thursday and Friday. More than 1,000 players are expected to be selected as the owners attempt to stock their rosters to meet the demands of the 24 major league clubs that will be operating next season. Each of the 20 big league teams that was active in 1968 is permitted to draft one free agent. Each of the Class Triple A farms and each of the Class Double A farms can take one player. There is an unlimited draft by Class A affiliates, in which the four new clubs will be permitted to select players. The players selected, of course, are not bound to sign contracts. If they do not sign, they go back into the pool for a later draft. However, a player who is selected by one team cannot negotiate with another club until he has gone through the same draft process again in January.

The Largest Group The regular phase of the draft covers only players never selected previously. This is, by far, the largest group. Last June there were 975 taken in the regular draft and only 194 in the secondary phase, involving players who were selected previously but not signed. In the regular phase, teams draft in inverse order of their 1967 finish. In the secondary phase, the order is determined by lot.

Because they finished last in the National League last year, and it is the National's turn to have first pick, the New York Mets will get the No. 1 draft of all available free agent talent when the meeting is called to order Thursday at 10 a.m., EDT. Oakland follows in the No. 2 spot, succeeded by Houston, the New York Yankees and so on down to the Boston Red Sox as No. 20.

In the secondary phase, the Chicago Cubs and White Sox will be the first two to make their selections. When they reach the Class A draft, Montreal will be 21, Seattle 22, San Diego 23 and Kansas City 24. Presumably, this will be reversed in other rounds. About a dozen of the players picked in the first draft, June, 1968, now are in the major leagues. They include outfielder Rick Monday of the Oakland A's, the No. 1 pick who was signed by the then Kansas City A's for 104,000.

Others from that first draft include pitcher Joe Coleman of Washington, catcher Johnny Bench of Cincinnati, pitcher Nolan Ryan and second baseman Ken Boswell of the New York Mets, pitcher Bob Moose of Pittsburgh, pitcher Stan Bahnen of the New York Yankees, third baseman Sal Bando of Oakland and pitcher Clyde Wright of the California Angels. The June draft in 1967 covered two days with 614 players taken in 29 rounds the first day and 555 in the second day in 45 additional regular rounds and 14 secondary rounds.

Harrelson's Four RBI Pace Boston Victory

Yastrzemski Collects 4 Hits, Culp Hurls 5-1 Win Over Orioles

BOSTON (AP) — Ken Harrelson drove in four runs with a single and a homer and Carl Yastrzemski collected four straight hits Saturday in powering the Boston Red Sox to a 5-1 victory over the Baltimore Orioles. Harrelson, recently promoted to the cleanup spot behind Yastrzemski in the batting order, continued his lustrous slugging with a two-run single in the first inning and his 10th homer for another pair of runs in the fifth. Yastrzemski extended his hitting streak to 10 games with four singles—two line shots and two of the infield variety—and scored twice before lining to left in the eighth. The 1967 Triple Crown winner hiked his average 14 points, from .331 to a mighty .345.

Even Record Backed by Boston's 1-2 punch, Ray Culp breezed to his second victory, evening his season record. Culp had only one brief lapse in dazzling the hard-hitting Orioles.

The Orioles collected two of their three hits in the fourth. Paul Blair led off the inning with a double into the left field corner, took third on an infield hit by Curt Motton and scored on Boog Powell's sacrifice fly. Culp struck out nine, walked only one and retired the last 16 Baltimore batters in order.

He was flown by helicopter to Indianapolis Methodist Hospital downtown and underwent immediate surgery. He was removed from the intensive care ward Friday but is still in a special frame. "He is quite alert, and his thinking capacities are all right," Dr. Hanna said. "He can move his left arm just a little." The hospital lists Hurt in fair condition, and a nurse said, "He seems to be doing fairly well." "He's pretty cooperative. I think this is an indication of how he's doing." Hurt's wife, Elizabeth, has been with him, but because of his condition he hasn't had many visitors. Bobby Unser, the Indianapolis winner, urged those at the victory dinner Friday night and race fans watching the televised event to "take a little time and send Bob Hurt a card. Let him know you are thinking about him."

Ken Rosewall Rallies, Tips Fitzgibbon

Richey Advances To Fourth Round Of French Open

By GEOFFREY MILLER PARIS (AP) — Professional Ken Rosewall came from behind and defeated Herb Fitzgibbon of Garden City, N.Y., Saturday in another sizzling pro-amateur duel in the French Open Tennis Championships. Rosewall, a veteran from Australia, rallied from a 5-1 deficit in the third set and went on to the quarter-finals with a 6-1, 4-6, 7-5, 6-4 triumph over Fitzgibbon.

One step behind Rosewall was Cliff Richey of San Angelo, Tex., who advanced to the fourth round by defeating Alan Stone of Australia 7-5, 6-3, 7-5. An intense crowd of 10,000 saw Fitzgibbon become the first player to take a set from Rosewall in the tournament.

Fights Back That was the second one, and it tied the match. The 25-year-old American then shot to a 5-1 lead in the third set and was at set point three different times. But Rosewall fought back, grabbed the set and added the next for the victory. The other amateurs in the tournament aren't finding it any easier to topple their pro opponents. Only one amateur has upset a pro, Boro Jovanovic of Yugoslavia stopping Australia's Fred Stolle Friday.

In other third-round matches, Ray Ruffels of Australia breezed past Patricio Cornejo of Chile 6-4, 6-2, 6-2, and Thomas Koch of Brazil eliminated Tim Ryan of South Africa 6-4, 6-1, 6-2.

When they reach the Class A draft, Montreal will be 21, Seattle 22, San Diego 23 and Kansas City 24. Presumably, this will be reversed in other rounds. About a dozen of the players picked in the first draft, June, 1968, now are in the major leagues. paying for the merchandise they have taken.

Waupaca County's three ma-

In Waupaca, grocery items

the merchandise taken, accord-

Peak shoplifting hours for teen-agers are at noon and after

the boy with a car.

"We run six or seven shoplift-sack Jack Algers, New London Popartments charge a shoplifter

the New London city ordinances were revised. There is now an "unlawful removal of property"

This type of ordinance takes a

Bea's

Secrets of Beauty

Now for a few tricks women might practice to intensify eye beauty and appeal... For those of you who have deep-set eyes, try using white make-up on the eyelid above your eye shadow, following with a darker base applied on the area immediately below the brow... blending carefully of course.

For those of you who feel your eyes are too close set, apply white make-up between your nose and your eye's inner corner. Carefully blend some of the white make-up a very short distance along the upper eyelid, then apply eye shadow, eyeliner and mascara a fraction of an inch from the inner corner of your upper eyelid.

Doing the right thing for your hair, however, is no problem at all... merely make your appointment at BEA'S BEAUTY SALON... All attentions to your hair are expertly and beautifully handled at BEA'S BEAUTY SALON... 225 E. College Ave. ... Phone 734-0707.
